NEW YEAR—5709

Special Message from The Chief Rabbi

The New Year messages printed below have been specially written for THE JEWISH CHRONICLE by the Chief Rabbi and other representative ecclesiastical heads in the Anglo-Jewish Community.

From the Very Rev. ISRAEL BRODIE, Chief Rabbi

5708 is the wonder year of Israel's history in these latter convulsive decades. At long last the State of Israel has become a fact to be "recognised publicly," realistically and juridically, sooner or later, by all nations of the world. In our long and chequered story, in which suffering and catastrophe have, alas, so oft been repeated, the emergence of the State of Israel is the dawn of what, we pray, will be a bright epoch in our annals. And so this central event which will have a profound effect upon Jewries the world over must form the subject of my first message to the numerous circle of readers of THE JEWISH CHRONICLE.

The road leading to the proclamation of the State of Israel has not been easy. At times it seems to have been paved with those primordial, slippery boulders out of which, in the eerie past, as our Sages mystically tell us, chaos and confusion Tohu Vavohu, were created. But Israel, tortured, bleeding, but undeterred, has come home. The great task will be to put the home in order after dank centuries of neglect. The coming years will tell not only of Israel's ability to make "wheat grow in the place of thistles and barley in the place of noisome weeds." They will, we pray, show Israel's determination to build a home on firm spiritual foundations "built of stone made ready" at the precious quarry of our prophets and lawgivers, so that "neither hammer nor axe nor any tool of iron be heard in the house while it is in the building," and that it be verily "a house built of the Lord."

But what of Jewries mi-hutz la-aretz, "beyond the Land"? To them I would say, 5709 finds us entered into the new era. It is incumbent upon Jews, wherever they are, to appreciate, as the days go by, what the new era means for them politically, communally, and spiritually. Many of the terms and patterns which we employ in thought and speech will require a reorientation and a redistribution of emphasis occasioned by the changed situation. But, above all, the lesson stands out that faith was the guiding light throughout the centuries which brightened the road for Jewry. This faith must be abiding and be translated by us into the "lamp of religious duty and the light which is the Torah." We must so live that we, outside the State of Israel together with those within, fulfil our ancient and sacred traditions, remaining true to Torah.

God grant that the coming year may bring peace and happiness to Israel and to a distressed world.

Israel Brodie

Chief Rabbi.

From Rabbi SHEMTOB GAGUIN

(Ecclesiastical Chief of the Spanish and Portuguese Jews in England and Principal of the Montefiore Theological College.)

כך היא נאולתן של ישראל בתחילה קימעא קימעא כל שהיא הולכת היא הולכת ומאירה (ירושי פ"ב ה"ב)

AT long last the shadows are beginning to lift from our trouble-chequered history, as the cruel agony of Israel's homelessness approaches its end. Though innumerable problems still beset our sorely-tried people, problems that may test our patience and endurance, let us keep in mind the Talmudical prediction that "Israel's redemption will proceed slowly in its initial stages, but will be sustained and sure, just as the dim light of dawn gradually gives way to the full brilliance of day." Let us, therefore, look forward to the New Year 5709 with a renewed upsurging of hope and faith in the ultimate accomplishment of the emancipation of Israel. But in the midst of the soul-shaking events now being enacted, let us never forget our paramount loyalty to the Torah, the torch that has guided and guarded our steps from Sinai to this day. Let us show that our mighty traditions are indeed imperishable, and remain valid for this generation as for generations past, that Judaism may continue to add its massive contribution towards the spiritual elevation of mankind.

The promise of Isaiah will be soon fulfilled: "Fear not, for I am with thee; I will bring thy seed from the east, and gather thee from the west; I will say to the north: 'Give up,' and to the south, 'Keep not back.' Bring my sons from far, and my daughters from the end of the earth."

From Rabbi KOPUL ROSEN,

(Principal Rabbi, Federation of Synagogues)

THOSE who live through the great moments of history can be affected in one of two ways. Either they become overwhelmed by the power of events and regard themselves as insignificant and purposeless creatures whose fate depends upon the chance of vast incomprehensible forces, or they sense the grandeur of the hour and regard the epoch-making happenings not as crushing circumstances but as a challenging adventure in which man becomes a partner in the Divine plan. The former leads to the swamp of despair, the latter to the heights of self-realisation.

Rosh Hashana and Yom Kippur summon man to rededication and atonement. The very nature of rededication is the conviction that man moulds himself, his destiny, and his world, and that by turning to God and obeying His will we can find the inner power to face great events, not with bewildered resignation but with a sense of potency and purpose.

It is no mere accident that the generation that saw the greatest slaughter in Jewish history has also been privileged to receive the inspiring opportunity to rebuild its life in a free and independent State of Israel. Rebuilding Jewish life calls for dedication and self-sacrifice of an unparalleled measure. It demands devotion to the Torah of Israel, to the people of Israel, to the Land of Israel.

We face a new opportunity in this New Year, but the sources of spiritual strength are neither old nor new. They are timeless, eternal. Let us turn to Him with sincerity and devotion, and He will grant us life, courage, and strength to do His will.

ARAB LEAGUE CRACKING? Negev a Vital Factor

From JON KIMCHE

HAIFA

There is no time for reflection in Israel. What happened a week ago is already ancient history. Events shaping the lives of the people here follow each other in one continuous mad rush. As a result, the public, and to some extent the Government, react to a series of impacts from outside; there is no opportunity to reflect and calmly to consider policy and action.

This week has been a typical example. At first the Bernadotte murder dominated everything. The anti-terrorist drive was the general pre-occupation. Anxiety about the after-effects of the assassination on Israel was great. But two days later came the publication of the Bernadotte Report. Public concern was largely diverted to consideration of the future of the Negev and of Jerusalem. Then came Mr. Marshall's statement in support of the murdered Count's report, and then followed British and French support.

New Factors

One would think that this would be sufficient pre-occupation for a small country in the course of one week. But the shocks and impacts were by no means exhausted. Strange new sounds were coming from the Arab countries, indicative that something was going on there which might introduce another new factor into the Palestine situation.

The Syrian Prime Minister, Jamil Mardam Bey, one of the most bellicose of the

U.N. DEFERS PALESTINE TALKS

Israel Maintains Claim to Negev

The question of Palestine is not likely to come before the United Nations General Assembly in Paris for at least a fortnight, and possibly as much as six weeks, since an Anglo-American proposal to place the subject first on the agenda of the Political and Security Committee was defeated.

The desirability of delay before considering the Palestine problem is one of the few matters on which Jews and Arabs at the United Nations appear to be in agreement.

It has already been officially stated that, while Jews may be prepared to compromise on the status of Jerusalem, they will not consent to the whole of the Negev going to the Arabs.

MEDIATOR'S REPORT

Israeli Counter-Proposals

[From our Own Correspondent—PARIS]

The Israeli counter-proposals to the recommendations contained in the late Count Bernadotte's report on Palestine have been issued here.

The Israeli Government offers a compromise with regard to the status of Jerusalem, suggesting that Israel should take the Jewish quarters of the city, that the Arab districts should be incorporated in an Arab State, and that only the Old City should be internationalised. The Jews, it is added, are not willing to give up possession of a corridor from Jerusalem to Tel-Aviv.

Nor will the Jews consent to give up the Negev, which they regard as being part of Israel under the General Assembly resolution of November last.

Furthermore, Israel is not prepared to discuss the return of the Arab refugees until there is a general peace settlement.

DELAY WELCOMED

[From our Own Correspondent—PARIS]

The Anglo-American proposal to give the Palestine question priority on the agenda of the First (Political and Security) Committee of the General Assembly was defeated on Wednesday afternoon.

Instead a compromise proposed by the Chairman (M. Spaak) was accepted, whereby the first place will go to atomic energy and the second to the Vishinsky proposal relating to disarmament, while the Palestine question will be the third to come up for consideration.

According to the Chairman, Palestine is likely to be discussed in a fortnight, but those who have had experience of the proceedings at Lake Success think it unlikely to receive consideration in less than six weeks, since the Russians are expected to prolong the discussion of the two preceding items.

The British, it is generally thought, wanted to press the Palestine issue in order to exploit the position created by the mediator's death. American support of the British proposal was half-hearted, because of the Presidential election issue.

The outstanding feature of the Committee's first session on Wednesday was the desire shared by both Jews and Arabs that the Palestine question should be

FRANCE SUPPORTS NEW PALESTINE PLAN

"Useful Basis"

The French Government believes that Count Bernadotte's final report on Palestine constitutes a useful basis for negotiations, it was officially announced in Paris following a meeting of the Council of Ministers.

M. Robert Schuman, Foreign Minister and French delegate at the United Nations, has been instructed to support the proposals in full.—(J.T.A.)

ACTING MEDIATOR'S PLEA

The acting United Nations mediator, Dr. Ralph Bunche, called on the Security Council in Paris on Wednesday for "urgent measures" to prevent a repetition of assassinations such as those of Count Bernadotte and Colonel Serot.

Dr. Bernard Joseph, Military Governor of Jerusalem, has repudiated the allegation by Dr. Bunche that the murders were due, in part, to negligence by the Israeli authorities. United Nations representatives, he pointed out, insisted on their right to travel freely and unaccompanied.—(Reuter)

11,000 IMMIGRANTS TO ISRAEL

September's Record Figure

[From our Correspondent—JERUSALEM]

The total number of Jewish immigrants to reach Israel during September is expected to have reached 11,000—a record for any single month—it was stated here last week by Mr. Itzhak Werfel, Immigration and Resettlement Officer in the newly-elected Jerusalem Zionist Executive.

The proposed immigration of 150,000 immigrants yearly will, he added, necessitate the expenditure of £22,000,000 for housing alone.

THE CAIRO EXPLOSION

Heavy Casualties

Casualties from the explosion which last week destroyed four houses in the Jewish quarter of Cairo (as reported in THE JEWISH CHRONICLE of September 24) are heavier than at first feared. The number of deaths has risen to 20.

In addition, 54 people are in hospital with injuries.—(Reuter)

MOTHERS AND CHILDREN IN ISRAEL

United Nations Aid

[From our Own Correspondent—PARIS]

Dr. R. M. Kahany, representative of the Israeli European Office at the United Nations, has signed an agreement here with the United Nations Children's Emergency Fund for aid to mothers and children in Israel. The Fund has allotted $60,000 for the purchase of food, out of a total of $413,000 earmarked for assistance to mothers and children among refugees in the Middle East.

This agreement is the first official act to be entered into between Israel and a United Nations agency.

JEWISH AGENCY'S FUTURE

[By a JEWISH CHRONICLE Reporter]

Professor S. Brodetsky, now the only London member of the Executive of the World Zionist Organisation, discussed with me, in an interview for THE JEWISH CHRONICLE, the results of the deliberations of the recent Actions Committee and his impressions of Israel.

He dealt with some of the confusion that has arisen over the difference between the World Zionist Organisation and the Jewish Agency. The latter, he said, was a body established by the Mandate for the purpose of advising the Mandatory Power concerning the Jewish National Home. It was extended in 1929 in order to include Jews, whether Zionists or not, to help in the building up of Palestine. In other words, the Jewish Agency had financial and political objects.

When the Mandate came to an end, the recognition of the Jewish Agency in accordance with the Mandate also came to an end. But the organisation, as such, was not destroyed, so that the financial and economic side of the work of the Jewish Agency will still continue. The technical position in regard to the Agency has not yet been dealt with.

It was clear, Professor Brodetsky continued, that direct contributions to the Israeli Government from citizens of other States were not conceivable, and that certain other kinds of activity might not be legal. But there were vast requirements to which these considerations did not apply, such as the preparation and transport of immigrants (which is to be paid for by the Joint Distribution Committee, an enormous act of co-operation on the part of this great American Jewish organisation), and also the maintenance of the immigrants in Palestine until they were settled in employment and in proper dwellings. In the spheres of health and education Jews outside the State could also help in a perfectly legal manner.

DR. WEIZMANN IN ISRAEL

[From our Correspondent—TEL-AVIV]

Dr. Weizmann, Israeli President, arrived in Southern Israel early yesterday (Thursday) morning, on the first 'plane of the new Israeli Commercial Air Line from Switzerland. He was met by Mr. Joseph Sprinzak, Chairman of the State Council.

LORDS AND BERNADOTTE REPORT

Archbishop of York Attacks Jews

[From our Parliamentary Correspondent]

Until they eradicated "this regime of violence," the Jews of Palestine could not be regarded as a civilised nation, declared the Archbishop of York, when he strongly criticised Jews in the course of the House of Lords debate last Friday on the international situation.

[The Archbishop was rebuked for his remarks by the Chief Rabbi, a report of whose statement on the subject appears on page 14.]

The debate was initiated by the Marquess of Salisbury who, in a brief reference to Palestine, welcomed the approval of the United States and the British Government of Count Bernadotte's report.

Viscount Samuel, in a vigorous denunciation of terrorism, said that the dreadful crime of the assassination of Count Bernadotte was a terrible blow to all well-wishers of mankind, but especially to those who, like himself, belonged to the Jewish Community. For some years he had warned the Jewish Community in Palestine that, unless they could extirpate the terrorist element from their midst, it would, in the long run, bring down in ruin the fine National Home which they had been constructing with so much enthusiasm and success. At last, and belatedly, forceful measures were being taken.

Support for U.N. Decision

As for the policy to be pursued in Palestine, they should support the decisions of the United Nations, hoping that they would be definite and would be applied with vigour and effectiveness. He hoped that Count Bernadotte's proposals, possibly with some minor amendment, generally agreed, could be carried into effect.

In the House of Commons, the Foreign Secretary, speaking on that subject, said: "The influence of His Majesty's Government is placed squarely behind the Mediator's recommendations." Then a Member of the House interrupted to ask whether that involved the recognition of the State of Israel. The Foreign Secretary replied: "The statement I have made does not involve recognition."

Did the observation of the Foreign Secretary mean simply that what he had said did not imply any immediate recognition before decisions had been reached by the United Nations, or did the statement mean that they were opposed to it in principle.

Lord Strabolgi expressed his horror and disgust at the brutal murder, by Jewish terrorists of Count Bernadotte and his French colleague. No fewer than six servants of the United Nations had been done to death by one side or the other and not always by Jewish extremists. Two French observer officers had been murdered by Arab soldiers. He had missed that particular point in the speeches that had been so far delivered. One lesson to be learnt from those events was that the United Nations should have a mobile International Police Force which could be sent to such an area as Palestine, and particularly Jerusalem.

Fighting in Holy City

The Archbishop of York had warned them some months ago what might happen to the Holy City when they surrendered their Mandate and left the area if no international force were available to restore order. They had had the terrible spectacle of the most holy place in the world being made the scene of fighting and bloodshed, a disgraceful scandal and a reflection upon the whole of Christianity. It could have been prevented.

During the second world war, the Government issued a warning that if Jerusalem were attacked by the Italian Air Force, there would be immediate reprisals against Rome, so seriously did they regard the sanctity of the Holy City. Yet they had allowed a small band of Arab legionaires first to attack and bombard it, and then fighting to become general in the most holy district in the whole world.

Referring to non-recognition by the British Government of the State of Israel after 16 nations had already recognised it, Lord Strabolgi said that after Count Bernadotte's report, sooner or later they would obviously have to recognise it.

Mr. Mayhew, speaking for the Foreign Office in another place, seemed to argue that to recognise the State of Israel would be an intervention in the Truce. Those considerations were before the other nations which had already recognised the State of Israel. In that case they seemed to be out of step with practically the rest of the world.

When recognition came, he trusted that it would mean the restoration of the State of Israel within the sterling area.

The re-emergence of the State and nation of Israel had great moral, religious, and political implications, and if they ignored this event it would be to their own hurt. To take the long view now, instead of being forced later into recognition, would give one more opportunity to heal the present deplorable breach between Britain and Jewry, and to restore the ancient friendship.

The Joint Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs (Lord Henderson) associated himself with the feelings of horror with which they had learned of the assassination of Count Bernadotte and with the tributes paid to the Mediator. The Government believed, he said, that the Mediator's conclusions must be taken as a whole and that it would be best for all if the plan could be put into operation in its entirety.

In reply to Lord Samuel's question, Lord Henderson said that the statement of policy which the Government had made did not involve the question of immediate recognition. The Foreign Secretary had said that they must first see what emerged from the discussions at the United Nations. Replying to the point raised by Lord Strabolgi, Lord Henderson said that Palestine was excluded from the sterling area on February 22 because it was foreseen that with the termination of the Mandate on May 15 it would not be possible to rely on exchange control being exercised in the manner required of members of the sterling area. That situation still existed, and the question of the readmission of part or all of Palestine to the sterling area was not one which could be considered at the present time.

The Archbishop of York associated himself with the expressions of horror that had been made over the assassination of Count Bernadotte.

"It is, of course, the latest of a long series of outrages, and the horror which has been felt throughout the world over this assassination may help other nations to understand better what we felt when our young soldiers were cruelly and treacherously murdered," he said. "After every one of these murders, or after a large number of them, there has come, either from the Agency or from the Jewish Government, an expression of horror; but, so far as I know, no criminal has yet been brought to justice.

"Cannot be Regarded as Civilised"

"I very much hope," the Archbishop added, "that the Jews in Palestine will take heed of the warnings which have been addressed to them from time to time by the noble Viscount, Lord Samuel. Until they eradicate this regime of violence, they cannot be regarded as a civilised nation."

The murder, he went on, took place in a part of Jerusalem which was under the control of the Jews and which they were policing for better order. That surely justified the fear of what would happen if ever Jerusalem came under the control of the Jews. When he had said publicly that there was some danger of the Jews seizing Jerusalem, he had been told he was slandering the Jewish people. To-day the Jews were claiming that Jerusalem should be theirs. If Jerusalem were to come under the rule of men like those at the head of the Hebrew University, or under the rule of the cultured men whom they knew in various countries of Europe, they should not have the fear they now possessed; but it would come under the rule of those who were not Orthodox Jews but fanatical nationalists. And under those conditions neither Christian nor Moslem could be certain of any toleration in the Holy City.

He hoped that the British representatives at the United Nations would press for Jerusalem and its immediate environment to be brought under international control.

In a reference to the 360,000 Arab refugees, the Archbishop said that some of them were deliberately driven out and that others fled the country after the massacre of 150 women and children in one of their villages. They had gone to countries which were impoverisbed. They had no rich friends in America or elsewhere who would help them. They had no powerful vote to support their claims in different countries. But it would be an appalling scandal if those unhappy people were allowed to die—as they would die—from starvation, typhus, and tuberculosis in the coming winter.

Recognition of Israel

The Lord Chancellor (Viscount Jowitt), in winding up the debate, also referred to the recognition of the State of Israel. For a very long time their principle of law had said that the requirements for recognition were always stipulated beforehand. Lord Jowitt quoted from Professor Lauterpacht's recent book, "Recognition in International Law":

"The requirements of recognition are identical with the requirements of statehood as laid down by international law, namely, the existence of an independent Government exercising effective authority within a defined area."

After citing examples, Lord Jowitt said that at the present moment, the question of recognition could not arise; but when Mr. Bevin said that he did not mean that the question of recognition might not arise in the future. It obviously might, but not at the present moment.

Viscount Samuel asked whether what the Lord Chancellor said applied to de facto recognition as well as to de jure recognition.

The Lord Chancellor: "There can be, I think, de facto recognition of a Government or of a country, and I think that that position will apply."

A.J.A. AND ISRAEL

President's Statement

[By a JEWISH CHRONICLE Reporter]

A statement by Mr. Leonard Stein, the President of the Anglo-Jewish Association, on Palestine, was made at a meeting of the Council on Tuesday, at the Rose Hertz Hall, Woburn House.

After commenting on the grievous calamity which had darkened the Palestine scene because of the death of Count Bernadotte, Mr. Stein said it was greatly to be regretted that the tragedy had in some quarters been made the occasion for an attempt to fasten collective responsibility on the Jews. Nothing could be more injurious and more unjust.

Mr. Hewins, in a letter to THE TIMES, had demanded that Jews everywhere should "get together to root out the murderers," and he predicted serious consequences "if civilised Jewry did not take drastic action." There was there, said Mr. Stein, the scarcely veiled suggestion that all Jews everywhere must expect to be held accountable for what happened in Israel. That suggestion had to be firmly repudiated. The responsibility for what happened in Israel rested with the Government and people of Israel. For Jews outside Palestine, Israel was an independent foreign state, whose destinies were in its own hands. Jews who were not citizens of Israel had no voice in its Government, and there could be no question of sharing responsibility. The people of Israel had rightly made it plain that they desired no such interference. That did not mean that what happened in Israel had no special significance for Jews elsewhere. It was their earnest prayer that Israel might be vouchsafed wise judgment and justify the lofty hopes reposed in it.

Bernadotte Proposals "Realistic"

Mr. Stein described Count Bernadotte's proposals for Palestine as "more in accord with the realities of the present situation." Given a firm and sustained Anglo-American lead and a modicum of statesmanlike moderation on the part of the contending parties there was at least a possibility that the uneasy truce might merge into the peace which Palestine so sorely needed.

The Rev. Leslie Edgar said the impression made on him by the statement was that it had been written with one eye on what the anti-Semite was going to say. He believed that the anti-Semite would do and say things anyhow, and that the statement would lull the community into a disastrous frame of mind. They had an obligation to tell the Anglo-Jewish Community that when anything terrible happened in one Jewish Community, the whole of the Jewish Community must rise up in its wrath and indignation and not rest until it had made its moral weight felt.

They had to try to get every Jew in this country to realise that Jewish reputation and honour, the whole standards for which they stood, were being threatened, and that they must not rest until they had devised some means to make their own feelings and their own devotion to Judaism felt in the world as strongly as Jewish nationalism had made itself felt.

Mr. Domb suggested that the A.J.A. should use its services to create some rapprochement between the Government of Israel and the British Government.

Mr. S. I. Salmon presented the financial report. The total of £813 raised by a special appeal was, he said, disappointing. They had to reduce their overdraft by December to a maximum of £2,000.

Rabbi Dr. S. Daiches wanted a warm spirit infused into the A.J.A.

"Overwhelming Talon"

Mr. Neville Laski retorted that Dr. Daiches misunderstood the situation. There was only one kind of red blood which extracted money from the community, and he did not need to say what that was. There was practically no way in which any communal institution could raise money against the one overwhelming talon that was taking the money from the community.

The Rev. Leslie Edgar said that the community was sick and tired of statements. Unless they could dramatically and effectively show action, then there was no hope of rivalling another organisation which they might like or dislike, but which was at least active.

Other matters dealt with were the ratification of the admission to the A.J.A. of the Edinburgh branch, and the appointment of a Public Relations subcommittee to co-operate with other bodies on Jewish Defence work.

Mr. Rowland Landman, presented the report of the Foreign Affairs Committee, and pointed out that the Trusted Committee Report on Aden did not refer to compensation to Jews. In view of the findings of the committee, it was inconceivable that no compensation would be paid. The Association was grateful to Professor Bentwich, who had so ably represented them there.

The Association, said Mr. Landman, had taken the initiative in trying to achieve some liaison between the four Jewish bodies with consultative status at the Economic and Social Council.

Mr. Neville Laski said the position of

SERMON FOR THE WEEK

The Force of Prayer

IN the sixty-second chapter of Isaiah, which is always read as part of the Haftara on the Sabbath preceding Rosh Hashana, these verses occur: "I have set watchmen upon thy walls, O Jerusalem, they shall never hold their peace day nor night; 'Ye that are the Lord's remembrancers, take ye no rest. And give Him no rest, till He establish and till He make Jerusalem a praise in the earth.'"

It is a statement of remarkable boldness. The holy city, with its Temple, had been reduced to ruins by an invading army. What had been the glory of Israel was now its shame. Splendour had turned to desolation. The disaster which had overwhelmed Jerusalem had eaten into the heart of the people.

One supreme longing animated them—the restoration of the city and its Sanctuary. As they dreamed of this hope, they could not but be sensible of their helplessness to realise it. Their strength as a nation had been crushed; so was not their dream vain? No, declares the prophet; a source of aid has still to be drawn upon. If God willed the destruction, He must (that is the word which expresses the prophet's thought) will the restoration.

LET those whose hearts yearned for the revival of the stricken city take their stand upon what remained of its walls, and night and day without ceasing supplicate God. "Ye remembrancers of the Lord"—or, to translate more literally, "ye who make the Lord to remember"—constantly remind Him, so to speak, of the tragedy which has befallen the people. This is strong language to use of God, but it becomes still stronger as the prophet continues: "And give Him no rest" until your petition meets with His response. Force His hand; make Him answer in spite of His wrath against the sinful nation. That is the advice which Isaiah gave to his countrymen in the hour of their extremity.

Such language sounds very strange to us, although it would not have done so to the prophet's hearers. They believed in the tremendous force of prayer, and were convinced that Heaven could be stormed by earnest and persistent supplication. God, was their Father; consequently His heart must be touched by their remorse and anguish. His frowns turn to smiles at their humble entreaty.

Our conception of God, on the other hand, tends to remove Him far from us and keep us from Him at a respectful distance. We have not the same feeling of intimate communion which possessed them, and so there existed in the ancient Hebrew a sense of close relationship with God which is foreign to us.

Hence the strangeness of Isaiah's phrases which, however, are in complete accord with the spirit of the Bible. Read, for example, the eighteenth chapter of Genesis which tells how Abraham sought again and again to avert God's decree of destruction upon Sodom and Gomorrah. In that narrative, as in many others, Scripture forcibly teaches the lesson that the prayer of man is able to affect the divine decree.

Have the times, or God, changed that this thought appears strange to us? It is we who have changed. To us, prayer means something very different from what it meant in the past.

Faith in the efficacy of prayer has weakened where it has not disappeared. Many have ceased to pray, either because they do not believe in God, or because He is a mere abstraction to them. But even with those who do pray, the act has not the intensity of purpose and the underlying sense of direct communion which we find in the Bible.

Precisely that is what Judaism requires of us during the Yomim Noraim. The penitential season of the Jewish calendar is essentially a time of prayer. For many it has degenerated into a formality. Synagogues are crowded and worshippers participate in the prescribed services; but do they pray?

YET there is much in the ritual of Rosh Hashana and Yom Kippur which puts into words the deepest needs and aspirations of the heart in the disturbed state of the world to-day. Prayers for personal amendment and purification, for the redemption of Israel, for the return of all men to allegiance to God and acknowledgment of His sovereignty—these traditional petitions are invested with a peculiar urgency at the present time when the very existence of human society is threatened by forces of evil. "May they all form one band to do Thy will with a perfect heart."

"May iniquity close her mouth, and all wickedness be wholly consumed like smoke when Thou makest the dominion of arrogance to pass away from the earth"—these are meaningful petitions which closely touch the life and fortune of each one of us. They should be offered not only with the lips but from the depths of the heart. Only then may we hope that they will be received with favour by Him Who is called "the Hearer of prayer."

the Jews in Moslem countries, part of the price which had to be paid for political Zionism, was far more serious than was generally known. In Egypt, there was discrimination of the most serious character. He referred also to the hanging of Mr. Ades and the circumstances surrounding his execution. A member of the Spanish and Portuguese Synagogue had been doing certain work on their behalf in North Africa, and had brought back serious reports. He did not think the Jewish public realised how serious the position was.

Mr. Ades was a member of a responsible mercantile house in Iraq and was allowed by the British Government to buy a considerable amount of scrap metal, which he sold to Italy. The Italian consignee diverted the cargo to Palestine, and for that, Mr. Ades was tried by a military court, was not allowed to defend himself, was fined a ferocious sum, and was condemned to be hanged. The hanging was carried out in circumstances of the most complete brutality. And that was done by an alleged civilised Government like that of Iraq.

Mr. Domb thought the interest of Anglo-Jewry would be admirably served if the A.J.A. were to write to the Press and set forth some of the things happening in the Moslem countries.

Dr. Daiches said as long as a national organ like THE TIMES published such a wicked letter as that from Mr. Hewins—which was the worst anti-Jewish document he had read in THE TIMES in the last 45 years—what could be said to the Moslem countries?

BOYCOTT PETERS OUT

A well-informed journalist friend of mine in New York, who had read our recent leader deprecating the stupid attempt in certain quarters in America to boycott British goods, tells me that it is his impression that the boycott has petered out. "By this time," he says, "the Jewish population as a whole, as well as the non-Jewish, seems to have forgotten about it. Victory in the Palestine war has widely been conceded to Israel, so that there is only a negligible, vestigial bitterness against Britain for supporting the Arab armies."

NURSES' WORKING PARTY

The author of the Minority Report of the Working Party on the Recruitment and Training of Nurses, just published, is Dr. John Cohen, now Lecturer in Psychology at Leeds University. Dr. Cohen, who was born in Wales, has edited two well-known publications, "Human Affairs" and "Education for Democracy." During the war he worked in the Cabinet Office on special work, and also did some psychological and psychiatric work which he continued during the period of post-war reconstruction. He was invited in January, 1946, to join the Working Party set up to review the position of the nursing profession. Dr. Cohen's main objection to the Majority Report, he told me, was that it did not go far enough in considering the real underlying problems in the nursing profession.

AT WORCESTER

The synagogal rooms in New Street, Worcester, are not the first Jewish place of worship in that city (writes "B.B.B.," who comments on the Three Choirs Festival on page 18). On inquiry, I learned of a site in Sansome Street, but information as to the date and exact location was not available. However, the late Sir Hubert Aloysius Leicester, in his "Worcester Remembered" (at p.218) observes that "immediately opposite to the Crown Hotel [in Broad Street] is a remarkably designed house of which no reliable history is obtainable. Old inhabitants affirm it was built, so far as the top part is concerned, to be used as a Jewish Synagogue." Certainly from external appearance, the top has a distinctly synagogal character. At the time I met Sir Hubert, the book in question had not been available, and the author passed away before another opportunity presented itself. Sir Hubert's statement can usefully become the starting point for further investigation. The congregation was helpful and active during the recent war, and continues, in peace, to keep the lamp of Judaism burning, to serve the residents and welcome the visitors, in apt consonance with the motto of the "Faithful City"—"Floreat semper fidelis civitas in bello et in pace fidelis."

A PARALLEL WHICH MEETS!

The new session will see the continuation, at one University, of an interesting parallel in the careers of the scholastically distinguished sons of two families well known in communal spheres. Laurence Jonathan Cohen, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Israel Cohen, and Michael Samuels, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Samuels, will meet once more, as lecturers in Edinburgh University. Both, as very young youngsters, went to the West Hampstead Jewish Day School; both went next to the Warwick House School, Hampstead (made famous by its German founder, Dr. Fritsch); then to St. Paul's School, and finally to Balliol College, Oxford. "Jon" Cohen obtained an Open Clement Scholarship at Balliol and got a Double First; Michael Samuels won a Clement Exhibition at Balliol and got a Second in "Mods" and a First in English Honours. In September, 1947, Cohen was appointed Assistant Lecturer in the Departments of Logic and Metaphysics at Edinburgh University—and Samuels has now been appointed Assistant Lecturer in the English Department of the same University! During the war, Cohen served in the Intelligence Service of the Admiralty as a Japanese translator at Kilindini and Colombo, and Samuels served at the Air Ministry.

DUBLIN PLAY

Much interest has been aroused by the play "Abdication," the première of which was presented last Monday night at the Gaiety Theatre, Dublin. The authoress is Mrs. H. T. Lowe-Porter, whose husband is Professor E. A. Lowe, the well-known Jewish palaeographist. Mrs. Lowe-Porter is the translator of the works of Thomas Mann, the famous German writer. From May, 1946, until this year, she worked at her translations in Oxford and London, and during that time Miss Rachel Daiches, the younger daughter of Rabbi Dr. Samuel Daiches, was her literary assistant and private secretary. I understand that Miss Daiches went to Dublin to be present at the first night's performance as the representative of the Lowe-Porter family.

OLDEST PROVINCIAL SYNAGOGUE

The records of the Plymouth Synagogue, which, as reported in THE JEWISH CHRONICLE recently, is to be demolished, make interesting reading and are available to the public in the Jewish Museum at Woburn House. There is a list of members compiled at the time of the Napoleonic Wars, with place of origin, port of entry, and previous place of residence carefully recorded in every case. An early Rabbi, Rabbi Moses Ephraim, who died in 1815 at the age of 70, is said to have obtained his Rabbinical Diploma at the early age of eight. The congregation, which was founded in 1752 and erected a synagogue nine years later, is now the oldest Provincial synagogue building still in use for its original purpose. Another distinction which it claims is that it provided a Chief Rabbi—in 1765. He was Rabbi Tevele Schiff, who was the local Minister.

BLESSED NEWCASTLE UNITED

The Chief Rabbi was in a humorous mood when he visited the Stepney Jewish Lads' Club last week, and one of the stories he told is likely to win him the respect of soccer fans just as other deeds have won him the esteem of the ex-Servicemen. When he recently visited his native city, Newcastle-upon-Tyne, he said he was given a civic welcome by the Lord Mayor and other leaders in the city. Remembering that Newcastle had a famous football team, he ended his address by saying: "I hope that the prospects of Newcastle United in the coming season will be bright." The other day he met a man from Newcastle who told him that the team had not lost a match since then. London teams had better give up the fight, commented Rabbi Brodie at Stepney; Newcastle are going to be on top.

CHRONICLER.

CHIEF RABBI'S RULING ON SPECIAL PRAYERS

The following letter has been sent to ministers by the Chief Rabbi:

"The inclusion of special Prayers and Psalms in the statutory Service on Sabbath mornings as directed by the former Deputy for the Chief Rabbi in his letter of May 10, 1948, should now be discontinued.

"I have been informed that in some synagogues the practice prevails of certain prayers being introduced which do not form part of the accepted ritual. Whilst I know that occasions may arise when the local congregation may desire to express their feelings in special prayer, I must request ministers not to make any addition or other change in the accepted ritual without my previous approval.

"Following the example of my predecessors, I shall issue special prayers to be recited in the synagogue, whenever the time or the event demands it.

"With best wishes for the New Year."

"FEDERATION" AND EDUCATION

£3,000 for London Board

[By a JEWISH CHRONICLE Reporter]

The Federation of Synagogues is to pay £1,000 a month to the London Board of Jewish Religious Education for the next three months. The question is then to be considered afresh.

This decision was taken at a special meeting of the General Council of the Federation, held at the Federation Offices, Leman Street, London, on Tuesday. An appeal is to be made in the Federation synagogues during the Yomim Noraim for the Kasher Canteen Services Department.

The Council also decided to empower the Honorary Officers to make an emergency grant to the Jewish Defence Committee's Appeal.

Mr. J. Goldberg, the President, presided, and expressed condemnation of the murder of Count Bernadotte.

They in the Federation, he said, had had difficulty in persuading their synagogues to accept the Education Tax, but the importance of the London Board had been recognised, and most of the synagogues had started to pay their full share. Up to the end of August, the Federation had handed over to the Board £22,071.

Kasher Canteen Service

When the London Board took over the Kasher Canteen Services Department he had assured them that the Federation would see that the department was continued until a new scheme was worked out. The Federation could not allow this work to stop; if the children were to eat trefa meals, all their teaching would be of little use. He expected that several members of the Federation would shortly be serving on the Kasher Canteen Services Committee.

The President called attention to an attack made on the Jewish people by a "certain Archbishop," who had "vilified the whole of Jewry because of the acts of one or two mad men in Palestine."

Rabbi Kopul Rosen said the attempt to condemn all Jews for the acts of one or two individuals was an old tactic of the anti-Semitic approach. They should never forget that while they must condemn what had taken place without any reservation, it had to be stressed that those who had been responsible for the policy of frustration and delay, and of often trying to exert economic strangulation on Israel, were not entirely free from blame. When one created an unhealthy atmosphere, unhealthy things occurred.

Referring to the appeal for the Kasher Canteen Services, Rabbi Kopul Rosen said that he was aware of the criticism that the meals were not good, that the service was not very satisfactory, and that canteens were dirty or understaffed. The defects could not be remedied without adequate finance.

The Chief Rabbi had sponsored an appeal for the Central British Fund and the United Jewish Relief Appeal, and the last thing he (Rabbi Rosen) wanted to do was to create the impression that the two appeals were conflicting. The appeal in the Federation synagogues was to be primarily for the Kasher Canteen Service, and the bulk of the money collected should go for that purpose; what was done with the rest of the money was a matter for each individual synagogue. If they wanted to give it to the C.B.F. and U.J.R.A., he would approve.

Mr. H. Gaventa said that he had been grieved that their Principal Rabbi was not present at the consecration of the Beth Din that day, while other Rabbanim and representatives of congregations were present. The Federation had always worked hand in hand with the Beth Din.

The President said that he himself very much regretted his inability to be present, but there was a representative of the Federation at the consecration. Since his election, he had received the greatest courtesy from other bodies, particularly the United Synagogue, and he did not take the attitude of his predecessors in regard to fighting. He could not answer for Rabbi Kopul Rosen in his absence. (Rabbi Rosen had by then left the meeting).

Mr. J. Turner, Vice-President, said they had to maintain the dignity of their Principal Rabbi, and it was unfair of Mr. Gaventa to have raised the question. They should have sufficient respect for the Principal Rabbi to accept that there was a reason which made it impossible for him to attend.

The President's statement was accepted.

Payments to London Board

Mr. J. Slutsky, Vice-Chairman, moved the recommendation of the Finance sub-committee that the Federation should make a payment of £1,000 per month to the London Board for the next three months, and consider the matter afresh after that date. Mr. M. Lederman, Treasurer, seconded, and the recommendation was adopted with one dissension.

An appeal on behalf of the Defence Fund of the Jewish Board of Deputies was made by Mr. L. J. Hydleman, J.P., and after the President and Mr. A. E. Magen had pledged the Federation's full support for the appeal, Mr. J. Slutsky moved the adoption of an enabling clause to allow the honorary officers, without transgressing the constitution, to make an emergency grant to the Appeal, and to submit it for ratification to the next Council meeting. Mr. A. Glassman and Mr. A. Mann, Honorary Officers, each donated 50 guineas to the Appeal.

The Council decided to renew the annual grant of £500 to the Yeshiva Etz Chaim from August 1; to give a grant of £50 to the Joint Committee for the Religious Education and Welfare of Refugee Children; and to give £42 to the Committee for Proclaiming Jewish Ethics.

BAYSWATER JEWISH CENTRE

The annual meeting and election of the Bayswater Jewish Centre was held in the Bayswater Synagogue Hall, Chichester Place, W.2, last week. The Chairman, Mr. E. J. Gottlieb, reported on the activities and progress of the centre since its inception in March. The President, the Rev. A. S. Super, paid tribute to the work of the retiring Executive.

The following were elected: Messrs. O. Hildebrand, Chairman; E. J. Gottlieb, Vice-Chairman; R. H. Myer, Hon. Treasurer; Mrs. L. Hildebrand, Hon. Secretary; and a Committee.

"An onslaught on the disease of anti-Semitism, attacking it in all its aspects from the brutal to the ridiculous.

"Those who have seen the film will know the story of the young newspaperman, who, told to make a study of the subject, 'becomes' a Jew for six months. The experiment shakes him. Now he knows the reality of the casual snub, the deliberate insult. Those six months nearly wreck his life.

"Propaganda? Oh, yes; but an excellent novel also; and a sword on the side of the angels."—Pamela Hansford Johnson, Sunday Chronicle.

JEWISH CHILD'S DAY

Second Annual Campaign

[By a JEWISH CHRONICLE Reporter]

The second annual Jewish Child's Day campaign was launched last week at the Adolph Tuck Hall, where a representative gathering met Mrs. Israel Brodie. Dr. Israel Feldman presided.

The first Jewish Child's Day was held last Chanucah and was arranged jointly by the Central British Fund and Youth Aliyah. Its purpose was the collection of funds to help Jewish children in need and also to focus attention on Jewish children as the heirs of Jewish tradition.

Mrs. Brodie said that of all the appeals before the community, none touched the heart more or awakened so much sympathy as that for the Jewish orphan child and the adolescent. Youth Aliyah had rescued many children and had brought them a little of the happiness of childhood of which they had been so cruelly deprived. Youth Aliyah also looked after their health and education, spiritual and secular, gave them a chance to live without fear and without suspicion, and fitted them to become useful members of the State of Israel.

The task of Youth Aliyah was not finished, Mrs. Brodie went on. There were still hundreds of thousands of children and young people to be saved. Youth Aliyah was entitled to ask everyone to discharge their parental obligations to those orphans who had no one else to whom to turn.

Chanucah Celebrations

Jewish Child's Day was to take place during Chanucah, which coincided with the civil new year, when children would be taken to parties, dances, and pantomimes, and would be given Chanucah presents. Those parties and dances should be given to the children, but they should be so organised as to help to provide the means for rehabilitating those orphans in their land, Eretz Yisrael.

What she had said, added Mrs. Brodie, was as true of the Central British Fund as of Youth Aliyah.

Mrs. A. Moss, of Manchester, gave some details of the activities already arranged in that city for Jewish Child's Day.

Mr. I. W. Goldberg, who is joint chairman with Dr. Feldman of Jewish Child's Day, said that in the past two years their families in the camps of Italy, Austria and Germany had been increased by about 1,000 babies born each month, teaching and training had continued. These had become the responsibility of both the C.B.F. and Youth Aliyah.

Miss Joan Stiebel described some of the work for which the C.B.F. was financially responsible. Twelve months ago, she said, newly born babies in the camps were being wrapped in paper; to-day they had complete layettes.

Lady Fletcher said that between October, 1947, and last April, 7,000 Youth Aliyah wards had reached Israel, the greatest immigration yet. Although they had arrived at a time of war, when difficulties were very great, they had been received and settled in Israel, and their. However, many children were still in Europe and homes had been set up for them there.

The Rev. I. Livingstone also spoke.

BRIXTON JEWISH EXHIBITION

[By a JEWISH CHRONICLE Reporter]

Following the successful Jewish exhibition held in the Brixton Synagogue Hall last week in connection with the local Lambeth Civic Week, the organiser, Mr. M. Domnitz, has been approached to arrange similar exhibitions in other districts of London and in the Provinces.

Any future exhibitions will not necessarily be quite like the Brixton one, Mr. Domnitz told me in an interview. "We do not want them to become stereotyped," he said. "One might stress the youth side, another the educational; so on."

Commenting on the Brixton exhibition, Mr. Domnitz said that the results far exceeded his expectations. "It was gratifying to find that the non-Jewish people felt that the exhibition conveyed so much to them," he said.

During the Civic Week activities, Mr. Domnitz, who is Secretary of the Central Lecture Committee, spoke on the "Jewish Contribution to Humanity" in the Arnold Mishcon Hall.

About £300 has been raised by a group of young ex-service men and women, who are working for the Jewish Relief Unit. This money has been raised by small gatherings held during the past two months, and has been given to the Central British Fund for relief work in the displaced persons' camps of Europe.

BETH DIN: NEW HOME CONSECRATED

Importance for World Jewry

[By a JEWISH CHRONICLE Reporter]

The new premises of the Beth Din and Beth Hamedrash at Adler House, Adler Street, London, E.1, were consecrated by the Chief Rabbi on Tuesday. The opening ceremony was performed by Sir Robert Waley Cohen, President of the United Synagogue.

After Sir Robert had unveiled the tablet in the hall, the Chief Rabbi, the Dayanim, and the Hon. Officers of the United Synagogue advanced to the entrance to the Court Room. The officiating clergy were the Chief Rabbi, Dayan I. Abramsky, Dayan I. Grunfeld, and Dayan M. Swift; the Reader was the Rev. A. Fuchsman.

In his address, the Chief Rabbi recalled that 43 years ago the late Dr. Hermann Adler consecrated the Beth Hamedrash and the Beth Din in Mulberry Street. At that time, hundreds of their brethren were fleeing from Tsarist Russia. They came to this free England for asylum and protection, and they found it. They brought with them the traditions of piety and of learning. The leaders of the community in those days felt it incumbent upon them to help those victims to establish themselves, and to adapt themselves to the life and surroundings of this country. It was necessary to acquaint them with English life, as well as English speech.

They now lived in a different world. Now the need was to teach Judaism to the present generation, and he felt it was wise to choose a building in the East End, which had become the most neglected part of London religiously.

After briefly describing the work of the Beth Din, the Chief Rabbi said that it seemed almost a pity that the community at large did not appreciate the important work done by the Beth Din even from the elementary point of view of Jewish defence. The London Beth Din was unique; it was the only important surviving Beth Din in Europe. But its net was spread all over the world.

The Beth Din, said Rabbi Brodie, had to deal with persons who had been misled by some sections of the community, calling themselves Reform and Liberal Jews who decided questions of a most serious nature and consequences without reference to Jewish law and its application. The Beth Din had got to try and disentangle the difficulties in which people become involved as a result of an unauthorised and un-Jewish decision.

Dayan I. Abramsky expressed, on behalf of his fellow-Dayanim and himself, the sentiments with which they entered those fine new premises. They would apply their Torah's teaching and its principles to all the manifold duties that awaited them.

Sir Robert Waley Cohen recalled that the Beth Din was founded about the end of the 17th century, and that the responsibility for its maintenance was accepted by the United Synagogue in 1872.

One of the things in which they took special pride in these days, when there was a slight totalitarian tendency in public affairs, was that the Beth Din rested upon the respect and confidence of the community.

'CONFLICT BETWEEN FAITH AND REASON'

Discussion at Yivo

[By a JEWISH CHRONICLE Reporter]

Discussing "The Conflict Between Faith and Reason in Judaism During the Middle Ages," at the Yiddish Scientific Institute (Yivo), Barclay House, 783, Finchley Road, N.W.11, on Monday, Dr. J. L. Teicher said there was a prevalent idea that Jewish faith was purely rational and that, therefore, there was no place at all within it for any conflict with another region of knowledge. In the course of Jewish history there had been periods of great tension between philosophical speculations and the upholders of the traditional laws of Judaism.

The attitude of the Yeshivot in the 19th century, which excluded the reading of Maimonides's books, was still perpetuated in one form or another even in their own days. Therefore such a conflict did exist.

The Talmud

Even the Talmud was not at all hostile to science. For example, there was a whole Mishna dealing with measures based on a geometrical treatise derived from the Greek. Another item was the tractate חולין which dealt with the pathological diseases of animals and was based on observation and scientific approach to the problem. It was legitimate to say that the general tendency was not hostility to science but rather the use of science as far as religious needs were concerned.

After the Talmudic period, there had been the period of the gaonim whose general tendency was rather realistic, and they had quite a legion of other thinkers before Maimonides. During all that period of development of Jewish philosophy, there was not the slightest trace of any conflict between science and religion or philosophy and faith.

Dr. Teicher made a penetrating analysis of his subject, with particular reference to Maimonides's book, "Guide to the Perplexed." Those Jews who had attacked Maimonides lived in France which, in the 13th century, was in the cultural sphere dominated by the foundation by the Pope of the University of Paris, with the professed aim of protecting the tenets of the Christian faith from the inroads of Greek philosophy on religion. The acceptance of the Biblical text as literal was, for the Christian theologians of that time, the cardinal basis of their faith. Jews who lived in a Christian environment accepted the same basis, and those who denied the literal meaning of the Bible were outside the Orthodox religion and, according to medieval conception, were heretics. The conflict between faith and philosophy, as exemplified in its origin within Jewry in the attack against Maimonides's ideas, was really, on the part of the Jews, an imitative process.

What they had learned was that there was a conflict between one philosophy and another philosophy.

ISRAEL AND THE TORAH

Religion as Basis of Law

[By a JEWISH CHRONICLE Reporter]

"That the laws of the State of Israel be based on the Torah" was the subject discussed at the Anglo-Palestinian Club on Thursday evening of last week, Mr. Fred M. Landau speaking for the proposition, and Mr. Arthur Dolland opposing it. The Chairman was Rabbi Spira.

The Ten Commandments, said Mr. Landau, were the principles of all legislation and were an example not of the will of the people, but on Divine Inspiration. The first condition of State conduct, he stressed, must mean that the Sabbath was introduced into a Jewish State not necessarily in all its rigours, but certainly in some of them.

The Sabbath Day for the Jewish people was more than an ordinary day of rest—it formed an indispensable part of the Jewish religion. Whether, with the invention of electricity or the wireless and other features of modern life, it was possible still to find a way of developing the Sabbath so that it could be observed in a modern State, was a matter of interpretation and development. But fundamentally he was in favour of making it a public law that it be an offence to trade on the Sabbath, or to open a shop on the Sabbath in a Jewish State.

State conduct, he urged, must also provide for the rules of kashrut, although what a man did privately was no concern of the State. It was also essential that the Rabbinical Courts should be incorporated with the courts of the land.

Voluntary Basis

Mr. Dolland said the voluntary basis was absolutely essential. "Rather," he said, "than insist on the outward form of the law, let us provide the facilities for Jewish education and step up the interest in Jewish learning and scholarship."

They should rely, he said, on the strength of Judaism itself and the value of its teachings rather than on a system under which police would have to enforce laws by penalties.

Mr. Dolland said the Israeli State was taking a very sensible attitude towards the matter, and drew attention to the fact that it had appointed a Minister of Religion.

A discussion followed, in the course of which Rabbi Spira said that there were minimum demands which the religious people had a right to make of the State, one of which was so to use the State machinery as to facilitate the work of persuasion which the religious people would undertake in Palestine.

A vote of thanks to the speakers was accorded on the motion of Mr. Ian Mikardo, M.P.

DISUNION AMONG ARABS

Arab leaders, addressing the Syrian Parliament, said that it was time they faced the fact that the Arabs had been defeated and that they must prepare for a long war if they wanted to defeat the Jews.

The President of the Egyptian Senate, Haikal Pasha, in a public speech in Rome, advised the Arab Governments to negotiate directly with the Jews.

The Cairo weekly, AKHBAR EL YOM, whose owners are close associates of King Farouk, published a highly ingenious proposal. It argued that perhaps recognition of Israel was less dangerous to the Arabs than a federated Arab-Jewish Palestine which would allow the Jews to infiltrate freely into the Arab areas of the Middle East.

Then reports from Cairo announced that Ismail Sidky Pasha, Egypt's elder statesman and permanent stand-in Prime Minister in times of crisis, had been asked by King Farouk to cut short his Riviera holiday and return to Cairo. Sidky Pasha spoke strongly against the Palestine war during the secret session of the Egyptian Senate before Egyptian troops invaded Palestine.

Abdullah versus The Rest

Lastly, came the conflict between King Abdullah and the rest of the Arab League. A "Palestine Arab Government" has now been set up in Gaza. Hilmi Pasha is its President, but meanwhile Abdullah has deprived him of his post as Military Governor of Jerusalem.

The Arab League also committed a last minute volte-face to keep in step with the crazy pattern of events. At first, the Political Committee of the League had opposed the formation of a purely Palestinian Arab Government and insisted on the inclusion of representatives of the League; particularly the Egyptians wanted to participate.

But both the ex-Mufti and Abdullah opposed this. The Mufti wanted complete control. Abdullah wanted no Government other than his own administration. So the League switched its policy. It agreed to a purely Palestinian Government, but it was to sit in Gaza, which is totally under Egyptian control. Already the political radio and propaganda war between Ramallah and the new Government is in full swing.

New Dissensions

These differences are not new. They have been known to many people, but not to the public at large. But now, for the first time, there is no longer any attempt made to hide them. There has always been a tendency on the Jewish side to exaggerate the importance of these domestic conflicts in Arab foreign policy. But this time there is a more substantial bone of contention.

By allocating the whole of the Negev to the Arabs, Count Bernadotte brought the Transjordan-Egyptian differences to a head. For the first time since the issue of Zionism united the Arab States on a common foreign policy, they find themselves at loggerheads. King Abdullah will not allow the Egyptians to have possession of all Southern Palestine. The Egyptians will not allow Transjordan possession. And the Israelis will not allow Arab possession of the entire Southern area. As if this were not enough, the British Foreign Office has also very determined ideas on the subject: the Negev must go to Abdullah.

This is now becoming the main issue of the Palestine settlement, and there are signs that it may be accompanied by phenomena which may surprise some Western statesmen. There have been tentative and unofficial Egyptian feelers suggesting they might split the Negev with the Jews to keep out the British and Abdullah. There was, for a time, not a little unexpected encouragement to the Israelis from Foreign Office and State Department circles to "have a go" at the Egyptians.

Prospects of Agreement

The cross currents are many, and they may produce strange combinations under the pressure of events. The Anglo-American intention of an Abdullah-Israeli solution may still succeed if it is brought about quickly and without too much haggling, by concessions to the Jews in the Negev and on the subject of Jerusalem. But if this is not done quickly, other forces will make themselves felt.

There is a growing anti-Abdullah feeling among the Left here, and particularly so in the Palmach units of the Army. They oppose any kind of settlement with Abdullah on the grounds that it would give the British new bases on the borders of Palestine—and trust in Britain's intentions is not particularly conspicuous in the Middle East to-day.

This distrust has been heightened by the belief that Britain really opposed the Unscop partition plan because the Negev was allocated to the Jews, and now supports the Bernadotte plan because it takes it away again.

There is no doubt that the Negev now moves into the focal position. Not only the Israeli but also Arab and British politics in the Middle East are now centred on it.

MEDIATOR'S PROPOSALS

Mr. Warbey's Analysis

[By a JEWISH CHRONICLE Reporter]

If one looked at the new Bernadotte proposals it was difficult to see why the boundaries he suggested should be considered more equitable than those of the United Nations decision of November 29, Mr. W. N. Warbey, M.P., told a meeting of the Progressive Business Men's Forum at La Boheme Restaurant, London, on Thursday of last week.

There was perhaps one advantage, he said, namely, that the Jewish State would be a completely contiguous area with no difficult corridors. But this involved the reduction of the size of the State to less than half of what had been proposed by the General Assembly. The Jews were being asked to accept one-eighth of what they had originally hoped to get. What was left was about the size of Devonshire. That was hardly a reasonable area in which to establish a new and viable State, capable of accommodating a million or a million and a half people.

Despite the fact that Count Bernadotte had been assassinated, said Mr. Warbey, his proposals should be considered solely on their merits and without any regard to the circumstances in which they were published, nor should we be influenced by the fact that they had now been endorsed by the American State Department and by the British Government. It was essential that the United Nations should create the means by which it could enforce its decisions. He hoped that the General Assembly would have the courage and sense to return to its own decision of November 29.

GENERAL ZIONISTS MERGE

The British Zionist Federation announces that agreements have been reached in Israel between Haoved Hatzioni (the chalutz section of the General Zionist Confederation), Aliyah Hadasha, and Group "A" of the General Zionists, whereby these three groupings have merged into one progressive bloc within the World Confederation of General Zionists.

The Central Council of the Confederation has recognised the new progressive bloc in Israel as one of the two sections into which Israeli General Zionism is divided.

POSTAL SERVICES TO PALESTINE

The Postmaster-General announces that the air and surface mail services to Palestine have been extended to certain places in Arab-controlled areas, of which the following are the more important: Beersheba, Bethlehem, El Faluja, Gaza, Jenin, Nablus, Ramallah, and Tulkarm.

The air mail service is still restricted to letters not exceeding two ounces in weight, and postcards. Registration facilities are not available by either route.

Air mail correspondence for those places in Palestine to which postal services are available can now be accepted up to the normal weight limit of 4 lb.

ISRAEL'S DIAMOND INDUSTRY

Mr. Oved Ben Ammi in London

[By a JEWISH CHRONICLE Reporter]

One of the effects of the ending of the Mandate, and with it the severance of political ties with Great Britain, has been that the State of Israel has to find its own unaided way in the international markets of the world. In order to arrange for necessary adjustments in the diamond industry, Mr. Oved Ben Ammi, President of the Diamond Manufacturers' Association, is at present in London.

The end of the Mandate, it is pointed out, did not mean the severance of economic links between Israel and Britain, although the present political confusion inevitably has had its effects on the economic aspect.

Britain purchases from Israel, or has done till now, the latter's citrus, its largest agricultural export, totalling between £6,000,000 and £8,000,000, and Israel purchases from Britain rough diamonds to the value of about £3,000,000 annually. The £3,000,000 thus expended by Israel is a considerable source of hard currency.

When Mr. Ben Ammi and his friends initiated and developed the industry in Palestine during the war, it was thought that it would permanently supersede Germany's former contribution in this field. But recently, French and Belgian industrialists, with indirect support from the United States authorities, have reopened operations in Germany. In addition it is understood that the Belgians have certain grievances against both the Israeli and Dutch diamond industrialists, and are proposing changes inimical to them.

Should this opposition grow, it might create obstacles to the industry in Israel.

AMERICAN ZIONIST PROTEST

Bernadotte Plan Denounced

[From our Correspondent—NEW YORK]

The American Zionist Emergency Council has sent to President Truman a protest against the endorsement by Mr. George Marshall, Secretary of State, of Count Bernadotte's plan for Palestine, which is denounced as a breach of the President's promise to support "without reserve" the General Assembly's decision of November last.

The protest claims that the new plan deprives Israel of two-thirds of the territory promised to it, and demands that the President should abide by the promises given by him and his party.

The signatories include Rabbi Abba Hillel Silver, for the Zionist Organisation of America, as well as representatives of Hadassah, the Labour Zionists, the Mizrachi, the Revisionists, Hashomer Hatzair, and Achdut Ha'avoda.

Dr. S. Segal, Labour M.P. for Preston, Lancashire, arrived in Jerusalem last week on "a private visit." He is to confer with representatives of the Hebrew University, in which he has always taken a special interest.—(Reuter)

JEWISH ORPHANAGE SYNAGOGUE

To the Editor of THE JEWISH CHRONICLE

SIR,—In a letter from me, published last March, an appeal was made for the renovation and re-equipment of the Jewish Orphanage Synagogue, after the damage it received from those who occupied the Orphanage during the war.

I very much regret to report that up to July 31 the amount received was only £946. The total cost is now found to be £4,000, and the work is well in hand.

The Very Rev. Chief Rabbi Israel Brodie, assisted by the Rev. B. Paletz, will reopen and reconsecrate the synagogue on November 21 next.

I again appeal to the community to associate themselves with this beautiful synagogue by sending me a gift "In Memoriam," or as a token of thanks to the Almighty that they have been spared and have blessings.

Our fatherless and motherless children, who are entitled to first consideration, are calling now. Please do not fail them.

Donations should be sent to the Secretary, Jewish Orphanage, 76, Leigham Court Road, Streatham, S.W.16.

MICHAEL COHEN,
President, Aid Society Movement.

LIBERAL SYNAGOGUE CONFERENCE

Attitude to the Jewish State Discussed

[By a JEWISH CHRONICLE Reporter]

The Union of Liberal and Progressive Synagogues decided, at their Conference on Sunday, not to formulate an attitude to the Jewish State in Palestine. Only five or six delegates voted in the affirmative.

The matter was brought up in the form of an invitation by the Council for the Conference to discuss "whether the Council should consider formulating on behalf of the Union an attitude to the Jewish State in Palestine." After a lengthy discussion, the Conference decided against formulating an attitude.

The Conference opened at the synagogue in St. John's Wood Road, London, with a service conducted by the Emeritus Minister, Rabbi Dr. Israel Mattuck, who also presided over all the sessions.

Dr. Mattuck said in his address that the blame for the murder of Count Bernadotte did not lie on all Jews. But it did lie at the door of those Jews who had pushed religion from its place of primacy in Jewish life and had turned the meaning of Jewish life into something far from its religious past and its religious destiny.

The Synagogue's Influence

The Rev. Leslie I. Edgar, the senior Minister, gave an address on "How Can the Synagogue exercise its influence in the modern world?"

He enumerated what he spoke of as the hard-won achievements of their movement, namely, that their leaders had secured for them a decorous synagogue where the worship of God was conducted with reverence; that they had secured for them a realistic synagogue—there was no shutting of the eyes to unpleasant facts in Liberal and Progressive Synagogues; and that they had secured for them a synagogue that had the spirit of spiritual adventure in it. They were not asked to believe what they could not believe, and they were asked to look forward and to work for continuous development in Judaism.

Mr. Edgar paid tribute to their lay ministers; but said that the work of the synagogue could not be fully effective unless there was an adequate number of whole-time ministers of the right kind, and he thought that a small Commission should be set up of the foremost leaders, both ecclesiastical and lay, in their Movement, to find out why young men of character and ability were not coming forward in sufficient numbers.

"Jack of all Trades"

One cause, he thought, was that they expected their ministers to be "Jack of all trades."

Above all else, he urged, they should concentrate on religious education. The root of their problem was not in the synagogue; it was in the home.

"This Movement," he said, "will never become really effective until there is a full-time director of religious education with assistant-directors, if necessary."

Mr. Edgar also suggested that they ought to find means of giving guidance on problems which troubled men in the modern world. He thought they should link up with other religious organisations.

The fundamental issue to-day was not between Judaism and Christianity, nor between Liberal and Orthodox Jewry. It was between religion and irreligion. In such a tremendous battle, they had to join forces with everybody who was on their side, even if they did not agree one hundred per cent with his point of view.

A discussion followed.

Dr. Woyda (S. London) stressed the youth aspect of the problem. The synagogue, he maintained, had failed, and, therefore, the young people had turned to substitutes for religion, to Zionism and Marxian Communism. These movements had attracted young people because they exercised influence on the modern world.

The synagogue must, he declared, be the central point around which Jewish life revolved as it did in ancient times.

The Hon. Lily H. Montagu, O.B.E., J.P., giving the presidential address at the general meeting which followed, said that their congregations had grown in membership and had increased their activities.

In their personal lives, most of them would assert that they were Jews, and believed in God, she said. But they could not be satisfied with their achievements, seeing that in all their synagogues congregational life was only supported by a small minority of members. The vast majority were chronically absent from their services. Their financial position was deplorable.

The strong urge to personal religion, said Miss Montagu, which the synagogue should stimulate, was hardly recognised. They drifted along and said "dayenu" while waiting for outward circumstances, sometimes of a tragic kind, to galvanise them into action.

"The synagogues of our Union," she urged, "should influence the outside world. We have a Union—the World Union for Progressive Judaism, of which our Union is a constituent—which asks for our co-operation in stemming the tide of materialism, in combating humanity's worst enemy—religious indifference and apathy—and which helps groups in every country to found and sustain congregations."

Material and Spiritual

This Union needed their material and spiritual support.

Mr. Henry Solomons, the Organising Secretary, and Mr. Maurice B. Baron, the Treasurer, presented their reports.

A resolution was carried to the effect that "this conference requests the Council of the Union to consider arranging a conference at the earliest possible date with the object of seeing whether it can formulate a statement about religious means whereby the Union can exert an influence for peace."

JEW EXECUTED IN IRAQ

Intervention Fails

[From our Middle East Correspondent]

Shafiq Ades, the Jewish millionaire, who was sentenced to death by an Iraqi court and fined 5,000,000 dinars (£5,000,000) for allegedly shipping British surplus war materials to Israel (as reported in last week's JEWISH CHRONICLE), was publicly hanged in Basra on Thursday last. His property has been confiscated.

British and American diplomats in Baghdad, as well as former Iraqi Ministers, unsuccessfully intervened on Ades's behalf.

The death sentence on his cousin, Ibrahim Ades, also a millionaire and similarly accused of pro-Zionist activities, has been quashed. He has been under arrest for four months.

The Iraqi Press, supported by the Government, has launched a violent anti-Jewish campaign, demanding the confiscation of funds and property of Iraqi Jews.

[Commenting on the hanging of Shafik Ades, an Israeli Foreign Ministry spokesman said in Tel-Aviv that Ades was hanged after a staged trial without the possibility of defending himself. The hanging was actually a murder to confiscate Ades's considerable property, the entire matter being part of the Iraqi policy to make Iraqi Jews the scapegoat for Arab military defeats.]

ANTI-JEWISH MEASURES IN SYRIA

Property Seized

[From our Middle East Correspondent]

New anti-Jewish measures recently approved by the Syrian authorities include the requisitioning of homes and business premises belonging to Jews who fled from Damascus and Aleppo to the Lebanon and other countries following the United Nations decision to partition Palestine last November.

Among other property seized by the authorities is the building of the Alliance Israélite Universelle in Damascus, built by the late Sir Elly Kadoorie in 1934. It is now occupied by Syrian troops.

All Jewish officials have been dismissed from the Syrian civil service. The few that survived the previous purge—mostly teachers—were recently discharged.

Damascus police have arrested a Jew, who, they allege, was plotting to kill Fawzi Kaukji. An inquiry commission stated that the accused was a member of Hagana, who entered Syria "to commit acts of terrorism."

The President of the Jewish Community in Kirkuk, Iraq, has been arrested and will face trial before a military court. He is alleged to have maintained contact with Hagana through his two sons, who are in Palestine.

THE BERLIN CRISIS

Jewish Neutrality

[From a Correspondent]

The Berlin Jewish Community has decided to remain neutral in the controversy between the occupation Powers in the German capital.

The cleavage between East and West has affected the unity of the Association of Nazi Victims in which Communist and non-Communist elements have clashed. To prevent the rift from growing and threatening the existence of the organisation, which is doing much good work in preventing a revival of Nazism, the Jewish Community has issued a statement urging Jews to remain neutral in the conflict.

It states, however, that the community will support all elements fighting against Fascism and anti-Semitism, and will maintain good relations with all four occupation Powers. The statement calls for the "fulfilment of our just claims—elimination of anti-Semitism and moral and material restitution."

The community expresses concern over the rift in the Association of Nazi Victims, and calls on Jewish members to defend the non-political character of "the only organisation which defends our interests."

GENOCIDE CONVENTION CONSIDERED BY U.N.

The question of United Nations action on the crime of genocide has been referred to the Legal Committee of the General Assembly. It has been instructed to draft a convention on the prevention and the repression of genocide.

Strong opposition to the convention is expected in the Legal Committee where it is believed that attempts will be made to postpone consideration of the issue.—(J.T.A.)

I.R.O. BUDGET APPROVED

Resettlement Appeal

[From our Correspondent—GENEVA]

Nearly $310,000,000 will be spent by the International Refugee Organisation in the next two years to find new homes for 800,000 displaced persons and refugees, according to a two-year budget approved by the I.R.O. General Council in Geneva last week. About half that sum will be spent on the repatriation and resettlement of 400,000 refugees by July, 1949, and the remainder by July, 1950.

More than $34,000,000 is to be set aside to help the 184,000 refugees no country is willing to accept—the so-called "hard core" cases.

In a unanimous resolution on resettlement, the Council appealed to the nations of the world, whether or not they belonged to I.R.O., to participate to the largest possible extent in a broad resettlement programme. It urged especially that refugees be resettled in family groups.

The Director-General, Mr. W. Tuck, was instructed to approach "all Governments of good will" to discuss the maximum share of refugees and D.P.s which they would be able and prepared to admit in order to complete the task of I.R.O. Mr. Tuck was further asked to seek governmental co-operation in resettling intellectuals and professional people who have in the past been unacceptable to most countries.

Australia's Offer

Supporting the resolution, the Australian delegate read a message from his Government offering "first-class resettlement opportunities for an unlimited number of D.P.s of the type which already has arrived."

The Canadian and French delegates described the efforts of their respective Governments in resettling refugees. Canada has agreed to admit 100,000 refugees "over a period of years," while France, although it has received only 16,000 D.P.s under I.R.O. sponsorship, has allowed more than 3,000 other refugees to cross its borders each month.

The Council decided, as an economy measure, to limit new admissions of refugees to its camps to those who would suffer "hardship" if denied care. The restriction will, however, be removed as soon as possible. It was reported that a minimum of 120,000 eligible refugees would request care and maintenance from I.R.O. if the "freeze order" was rescinded.

Refugees May Appeal

The semi-judicial system established by the I.R.O. Preparatory Commission to enable applicants for assistance to appeal against decisions on their status will be retained.

A report on the work of the International Tracing Service established by I.R.O. to search on an international level for persons who disappeared during the war, showed that the I.T.S. received 42,631 requests for lost children in Europe. So far it has been able to discover 641 children deported to Germany during the war.

After an hour's secret debate, the Council decided not to give material aid to the 300,000 Arab refugees in Palestine. It adopted a resolution declaring that although it was "deeply sensitive of the task of relieving such distress, it was felt that its present resources were inadequate."

Italy announced that it will join the I.R.O.—the first country outside the United Nations to do so.

FUNERAL OF COUNT BERNADOTTE

Israel Represented

The body of Count Folke Bernadotte was cremated in Stockholm on Sunday last. Mourners included King Gustav, members of the Swedish, Danish, and Norwegian Royal Families, Mr. Abba Eban, Israeli's representative, who flew from Paris for the funeral, Mr. Trygve Lie, Secretary-General of the United Nations, and Sir Alexander Cagodan, President of the Security Council.

Previously, a funeral service was held in the Gustav Vasa Church at which representatives from Israel and the Arab world sat side by side. A wreath from the Israeli Government was placed on the centre of the coffin.—(Reuter)

ANNIVERSARY OF TERROR IN DENMARK

Premier at Memorial Meeting

[From Our Correspondent—COPENHAGEN]

Wednesday

Mr. Hans Hedtoft, Danish Prime Minister, is to attend a meeting here to-morrow, arranged by the Jewish Youth Association, to commemorate the fifth anniversary of the Nazi terror against Danish Jewry. Mr. Hedtoft was a member of the secret organisation which helped hundreds of Jews to escape to Sweden during the occupation.

It was on Rosh Hashana that the Gestapo, assisted by Danish Nazis, surrounded the synagogues and arrested Jewish leaders. Nightly round-ups of Jews followed until nearly 2,000 were detained.

The Swedish Government protested against the Nazi terror and warned the German authorities that persecution of Danish Jews would have serious repercussions in Sweden. It offered to find homes for all Jews expelled from Denmark.

D.P.s FLY TO ISRAEL FROM GERMANY

Regular Service Planned

[From our Correspondent—ATHENS]

A group of 45 Jewish displaced persons, including 12 children, arrived at Athens airport last week from Munich, en route to Haifa.

The refugees, none of whom were of military age, had been issued with special "D.P. passports." Most of them fled from Poland in 1946 and had been living in camps near Berlin.

This was the first air transfer of refugees from Germany to Israel, and it is planned to establish a regular air service between the two countries for emigrants. The Greek authorities have raised no objection to aircraft destined for Israel refuelling at Athens airport.

PRESIDENT'S NEW YEAR MESSAGE

"Help Establish Peace"

President Truman has issued the follow- New Year message to the Jews of the United States:

"I extend cordial greetings to all my fellow Americans of the Jewish faith on this anniversary of the commencement of the New Year. I am confident that you will vigorously play your part in solving the many problems which confront us. Let us pray that our continued efforts to establish a peaceful world will meet with an increasing measure of success."

Mr. Thomas E. Dewey, Republican Presidential candidate, said in a message that "the steadfastness with which the Jewish people have held to their faith and ideals in the face of persecution, tribulation, and martyrdom has preserved their great spiritual and moral strength and made them champions of liberty and righteousness." The Jewish people, he said, may meet the New Year with confidence and expectation of a brighter and happier future. "Men of good will everywhere pray and hope together with you that the New Year will bring strength, security, and peace to the reborn nation of Israel."—(J.T.A.)

ILSE KOCH CASE

New Inquiry Ordered

[From our Correspondent—NEW YORK]

A new inquiry into the Ilse Koch case has been ordered by Mr. K. Royall, Secretary of the Army Department. He has asked General Clay, U.S. Commander in Europe, to re-examine the whole case and determine whether new charges are possible against her. Koch, who became notorious for ordering lampshades to be made from the skin of tattooed prisoners, is the widow of the commandant of the Buchenwald death camp.

Widespread criticism of the decision to reduce Koch's sentence had earlier forced Mr. Royall to issue an interim statement intended to justify the action. He quoted a report by the Deputy Advocate-General saying there was "insufficient evidence against Koch that she possessed any articles made of human skin."

Hundreds of protests against the commutation of the sentence have been received by the authorities. Mr. Denson, chief prosecutor in the Buchenwald camp trials, denounced the commutation as "a travesty of justice."

Dr. Stephen S. Wise, President of the World Jewish Congress, in a message to the Secretary of Defence, urged an investigation of the commutation with a view to possible reversal of the decision "in order to assure the deserved punishment of those responsible for unparalleled crimes against humanity."

Reports from Germany indicate that the reduction of Koch's sentence has met with considerable opposition there. If she is released next year, she may be brought before a German criminal court.

ACCUSATION BY DR. MAGNES

A large measure of responsibility for the murder of Count Bernadotte falls upon the official circles of Israel "who at one time or another carried on joint activities with the terrorists and came to an understanding with them," says Dr. Judah L. Magnes, President of the Hebrew University and head of the Ichud, in a letter to the NEW YORK TIMES.

He adds that a large number of Americans who supported the terrorists, both morally and financially, are also responsible for the crime.

MR. WALLACE ATTACKS BERNADOTTE PLAN

Mr. Henry Wallace, Presidential candidate of the Progressive Party, this week attacked Mr. Marshall's endorsement of the Bernadotte plan for Palestine.

"The most shocking aspect of the plan is the recommendation that the Jews give up the Negev assigned to them by the United Nations," Mr. Wallace said.

ISRAELI FOOTBALL TEAM BEATEN

Thirty thousand people gave an enthusiastic reception to the Israeli soccer team at the New York Polo Field on Sunday last, when it played its first match against the American Olympic team. The Americans won by 3-1.

The Israeli team were greeted by the Mayor of New York and other civic leaders.

EXTREMIST GROUP DISBANDS

The U.S. organisation which has been financing the Stern Gang—the American Friends of the Sternist Fighters for Israel—has decided to disband.

A statement announcing the dissolution of the organisation gives no reason for the action. It merely attacks the Israeli Government for its "brutal campaign" against the Stern Gang, and repeats charges that Count Bernadotte was a British agent.

Letter from New York

PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATES' ATTITUDE TO ISRAEL

By AMERICANUS

WITH the Presidential campaign beginning, the U.N. General Assembly gathered to consider Palestine, inter alia, and the aftermath of the Bernadotte assassination not yet taking a definite shape, the situation of Israel, and even of American Jews in general, is in a state of confusion. All one can do at the moment is to try to discern some simple patterns through the clouds of dust.

The killing of the mediator stunned American Jewry. Most comments were couched in vigorously denunciatory terms of the assassins, although few reached the heights of violent emotion of the Israeli Government's official communiqué. Oddly enough, however, a number of previously subdued feelings concerning the Count's work came to the surface. I have heard several times the blunt remark: "Well, he was doing Britain's job."

The general Press was most careful to distinguish between the illegal terrorist assassins and the Government. One not very responsible radio commentator with a tremendous audience declared baldly, with no elaboration, that the assassination was a Communist plot. TIME magazine used the event as another occasion to spread to its immense readership a few anti-Zionist innuendoes that had overtones of anti-Semitism. It is difficult to gauge the reaction among the American population, but, to judge on the basis of the still widespread lack of interest in and ignorance of the United Nations, it is probable that Count Bernadotte's death left little more than a ripple in the general public's consciousness.

Vague Statements

At present, it seems unlikely that the assassination will make much difference in the campaign declarations concerning Israel of the various Presidential candidates. Mr. Wallace will probably press even more vigorously for lifting the arms embargo and de jure recognition, and Mr. Truman and Mr. Dewey will probably not depart from their attractive, but vague, official platform statements.

There have been numerous rumours predicting the actions of Mr. Truman shortly before the election and those of Mr. Dewey should he win. It is bruited about that Mr. Truman will, in a dramatic gesture, perhaps in the week before the polls, grant full de jure status and support the $100,000,000 loan to Israel. (In speaking to Dr. Chaim Weizmann about the loan, the President is reported to have said that he thought it could be arranged. "After all," he is quoted as saying, "the Jews always pay their debts.") The NEW YORK STAR, which supports Mr. Truman, in a leader urging both of these steps, declared: "The Palestine issue has become a sort of screen test of Mr. Truman's sincerity in this election year." Certainly, the effect of the President's de facto recognition has largely worn off. (Some cynical observers have lately been saying that Mr. Truman gained more from the de facto recognition than did Israel.) The rumours about the President's expected act, however, do not tally with a State Department indication that recognition will be granted after Israel holds its elections, regardless of when these will be. The support by Mr. Marshall, Secretary of State, at the General Assembly of Count Bernadotte's Palestine plan has so far not been commented upon by President Truman in any important way in his present cross-country trek, but he may have something to say when he returns East.

New York Vote Assured

Concerning the Republicans, the rumours have run something like this: John Foster Dulles, putative Republican Secretary of State, has been advising Mr. Dewey against taking a pro-Israel stand, since sentiment in the country as a whole is not pro-Jewish and not especially sympathetic to Israeli aspirations; that New York, Mr. Dewey's home State, is safe anyway, and, therefore, New York City's large Jewish vote does not have to be wooed; and, that Wall Street oil interests hold Mr. Dewey back from favouring the Israeli State.

A radio commentator (not the one mentioned above), not especially noted for the accuracy of his forecasting, has predicted that the Republican Secretary of State will not be Mr. Dulles, but Harold Stassen, defeated candidate for the nomination. Mr. Stassen, a former Governor of Minnesota, in his energetic eagerness to get the support of various elements in the country in his nomination race was reputed to have lent tacit support where anti-Semitism was strong. Mr. Dewey's present campaign itinerary is scheduled to avoid West Virginia because Chapman Revercomb, the Republican Senator standing for re-election in that State, opposed a liberal D.P. bill.

If Mr. Dewey is elected, and one responsible poll-taker has already conceded the election to him, he will have a knotty problem on his hands in the person of David Lilienthal, Jewish Chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission, perhaps as important a post in to-day's world as, say, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court. A number of Republican Senators are out for Mr. Lilienthal's scalp simply because he is a Jew, according to Elmer Davis writing in the current HARPER'S MAGAZINE. Mr. Dewey's pre-election statements on this matter (if any) will be awaited with interest by Jewish groups.

Western Orientation

Neither of the major candidates has made any remarks that I know of on the question of Soviet Russia and Israel, a subject which has occasionally taken on the air of a film of international intrigue. A commonly repeated story, which even had the prestige of the NEW YORK TIMES briefly starched into its patent limpness, was that the majority of immigrants to Israel were Russian agents. Another tale, somewhat more plausible on the surface, is that the Israeli Government is engaged in the Power politics game of playing Soviet Russia off against Great Britain and the United States, extorting from each side the most it can get by threatening to go over to the other. The truth, however, which is certainly not simple, and not readily ascertainable, seems to be that the Israeli Government, as it is now constituted, has given assurances or, at least, strong indications to the United States, if not to Britain, that its orientation is firmly Western.

A report in the Liberal weekly, NATION, by a correspondent just returned from Israel, declares that the Government there is an identical counterpart of the present British Cabinet, and that the leaders could be reshuffled without changing any policy, save that on Palestine. "Bevin, to be sure," the writer says, "is a case by himself; his anti-Jewish bias can be explained only in psychiatric terms." It would be hard to understand the U.S. Government's cavalier attitude toward Israel, with the President and the State Department freely contradicting each other, on any other ground than America's complete confidence in Israel's future course vis à vis Russia and itself. This interpretation also serves to make somewhat clearer the apparently paradoxical Communist position of supporting Israel and Zionism but violently attacking Israeli and Zionist leaders.

BREAD, MEAT, AND COAL SOCIETY

[By a JEWISH CHRONICLE Reporter]

Mr. E. R. M. Spielman, President of the Jewish Bread, Meat, and Coal Society—the oldest Anglo-Jewish charity—stated at the annual meeting last week, at 125, Middlesex Street, E.1, that it was proposed to discontinue the issue of bread, meat, and coal tickets owing to the reluctance of tradespeople to accept relief tickets under present conditions. The committee would continue to distribute bread, meat, and coal. Last season's distribution amounted to £3,610, which was the second best in the history of the Society.

Mr. Gerald B. Joseph, the Hon. Secretary, seconded the report, which was adopted. The accounts were adopted on the motion of the Hon. Treasurer, Mr. J. A. May.

The following Hon. Officers and committee were re-elected: Messrs. E. R. M. Spielman, President; Philip Waley, Vice-President; J. A. May and Spencer Seligman, Hon. Treasurers; Gerald B. Joseph, Hon. Secretary; N. L. Davidson, Alphonse D. Joseph, Owen E. Mocatta, and Maurice Woolf, Committee. Mr. P. N. W. Joseph was elected Hon. Solicitor.

OCTOBER 1, 1948—ELLUL 27, 5708

ROSH HASHANA

ON Sunday evening at sunset the New Year of 5709 will be ushered in. Jewry throughout the world will mark its advent with all the religious solemnities attaching to Rosh Hashana. In every household, the partaking of apple and honey will symbolise the prayer that we may be granted a happy and pleasant year. For ourselves and others we shall pray that we may be inscribed in the book of life. The inauguration of the Ten Days of Penitence will be observed by crowded congregations, who will thrill to the sound of the Shofar and fervently participate in the traditional rites. No member of the Jewish people, who is at all mindful of his heritage, can be unresponsive to the season's stirring appeal. Upon both the individual and the communal conscience is impressed the warning: "Awake, ye sleepers, and ponder your deeds; remember your Creator and go back to Him in penitence." In its twofold aspect as the Day of Memorial and the Day of Judgment, we shall find ample material for reflection at this particular New Year.

The departing year of 5708 will be for ever memorable in Jewish annals for the establishment of the State of Israel. This constitutes an epoch-making event, the full significance of which will only be realised by future generations. But already it is seen to be an historic happening pregnant with meaning for Jewry's destiny. Since the momentous decision of the United Nations, a mighty stream of developments has been set in motion. This stream is still in full and rapid course, nor can its final consequences yet be determined. At this solemn hour, all must pray that the new State will, under the Divine Providence, bring blessing and salvation to Jewry and mankind. The words of our liturgy will have a more than ordinary urgency: "Now, therefore, O Lord our God, impose thine awe over all thy works, and thy dread over all that thou hast created, that all thy works may fear thee and all creatures prostrate themselves before thee, that they may all form a single band to do thy will with a perfect heart. . . . Give, then, O Lord, glory unto thy people, praise to them that fear thee, hope to them that seek thee, confidence to them that wait for thee, joy to thy land, gladness to thy City. . . . Violence shall close her mouth, and all wickedness vanish like smoke, when thou shalt blot the rule of tyranny from the earth. And thou, O Lord, shall reign, thou alone, over all thy works on Mount Zion, the dwelling-place of thy glory, and in Jerusalem, thy holy City." At a time when the Government of Israel and the Assembly of the United Nations are confronted with the taking of momentous decisions, our prayers must be charged with a sense of very present need for help from on High.

And if we turn to the more immediate situation of Anglo-Jewry itself, 5708 has also marked a turning-point in our lives. After an interval of nearly two and a half years since the death of Dr. HERTZ, Rabbi ISRAEL BRODIE was appointed as Chief Rabbi of the United Hebrew Congregations of the British Commonwealth and Empire. His vigorous leadership has already brought strength and confidence into our counsels. Particularly notable has been his assertion of the need for unity in our communal endeavours. This has been exemplified in his plea (recently printed in this paper) for a united charitable appeal at this solemn season. In the course of his letter to all synagogues under his jurisdiction, he wrote as follows: "Unity and co-ordination in the work of our community are essential. The Central British Fund and the United Jewish Relief Appeal are both deserving of support. I commend them both, and urge that your community should make one appeal, either on Rosh Hashana or on Yom Kippur, for the two funds, and I suggest that the money collected be divided between them in the proportion of 80 per cent to the Central British Fund and 20 per cent to the United Jewish Relief Appeal. I am confident that one united appeal will evoke the generous response from the community befitting the cause, and in keeping with the spirit of gemilut chasadim (discerning charity), which has ever been our pride." It must be an obligation upon Anglo-Jewry, which so recently unanimously chose Rabbi BRODIE as its spiritual guide, to respond wholeheartedly to his call. The success of this appeal will be a test of our capacity to rise to the demands and opportunities of the Yamim Noraim. Standing on the threshold of 5709, we must show ourselves a disciplined and unified community, worthy and able to ensure the transmission of a noble heritage.

EDUCATIONAL NEEDS

THIS week's meeting of the General Council of the Federation of Synagogues directed its main attention to the educational needs of the community. It was reported that, despite difficulties in raising the full amount of the education tax, the Federation had already handed over to the London Board of Jewish Religious Education more than £22,000. Furthermore, it was decided to make a payment to the same body of £1,000 a month for the next three months. In addition, it was resolved that the main appeal in the Federation's synagogues during the Yamim Noraim should be on behalf of the Kosher School Meals Services Department of the Board. This last-named resolution was all the more significant, because it underlined the priority which the Federation attaches to this cause. In consequence, the Federation was unable to fall into line with the Chief Rabbi's plea, addressed to the synagogues which recognise his authority, that this season's Holy-day appeal should be devoted primarily to the C.B.F. and the U.J.R.A. There must be regret that complete unanimity has not prevailed among all sections of Anglo-Jewry regarding the charitable activities associated with the celebration of Rosh Hashana and Yom Kippur. Yet, whatever criticism may rightly be made of the precise manner of its demonstration in this particular regard, real concern for the cause of Jewish education is evidently felt by the Federation of Synagogues at this time. And this concern must be widely shared by all who have at heart the future well-being of Anglo-Jewry.

The Editor of THE JEWISH CHRONICLE sincerely wishes readers and Jewish Communities everywhere a happy New Year

לשנה טובה תכתבו

It is only too clear that a grave crisis has been reached in the development of Jewish religious education in this country. When the system of communal taxation was introduced, two and a half years ago, great hopes and expectations were entertained that it would solve at least the financial side of the problem. Congregants willingly acquiesced in the payment of a 33⅓ per cent tax on their synagogue seat rentals, believing that our educational authorities had planned a budget that would see the scheme through. For some time, indeed, everything appeared lovely in the pedagogic garden. Rosy reports were circulated and all seemed set fair. But gradually the horizon has become overclouded. The difficulties connected with the schemes for a projected Teachers' Training Institute and for the provision of kasher canteens have helped to bring matters to a head. Quite apart, also, from any desired developments, it has become apparent that there is insufficient revenue to support commitments already undertaken. Of late, the National Union of Hebrew Teachers has been complaining bitterly about measures of retrenchment which have, it is alleged, very adversely affected the teaching staffs, and there is much rumour and counter-rumour in synagogues on the unsatisfactory position of the various Hebrew classes. All these difficulties have had their repercussions upon the deliberations of our educational authorities. Last July, Dr. B. Homa resigned from the chairmanship of the London Board of Jewish Religious Education. He was succeeded in that office by Mr. I. W. Goldberg, who, a month ago, made a grave statement about the financial crisis which faces the Board. This financial crisis must equally affect the Central Council for Jewish Religious Education, which covers the whole Anglo-Jewish Community, and of which Dr. Homa at present remains the Chairman. Although by their very nature, the Central Council and the London Board should be working in the closest liaison (it will be remembered that at their inception they had the same Chairman in Dr. M. Epstein), there is some reason to fear that they are in process of drifting apart. There is as yet no settled constitution for these bodies—indeed, Mr. Goldberg forcibly pointed out this lack as far as the London Board is concerned only a few weeks ago—and in its absence it is impossible to make really binding decisions. It is to be hoped that advantage will be taken of the biennial election meeting of the Central Council, which has been called for October 10, to straighten out some of the questions which are perplexing the community regarding the whole subject of Jewish education.

THE BETH DIN

THE opening and consecration of the new premises of the London Beth Din is a notable occasion in the religious life of Anglo-Jewry. The leading participants in the impressive ceremonial were the Chief Rabbi and the Dayanim and the President of the United Synagogue, Sir Robert Waley Cohen; and the timing of the function for this solemn season further stresses its importance. Readers will find much valuable information about the activities of this institution in the article by Dayan Dr. A. Grunfeld on page 13. According to the historic Jewish tradition, it is officially designated Beth Din, the House of Judgment. In this country, it is known also as the Chief Rabbi's Court, because, constitutionally, the Chief Rabbi is ex officio its President—the Ab Beth Din. The members on the bench of this Jewish Court are designated Dayanim, a Hebrew-Aramaic title, which might be translated "judges," although they combine a multiplicity of duties extending beyond the usual connotation of that term. For the purpose of the civil law, the members of the Court are described as "Ecclesiastical Assessors to the Chief Rabbi." The conception of Judaism as a system of Divine Law has given the Beth Din a foremost authority throughout the ages. In this country, it functioned in the pre-Expulsion period, and was reinstituted after the Resettlement. In 1902, its work was greatly extended; until now, after the destruction of the Botei Din of Continental Jewry, the London Beth Din constitutes, in Dayan Grunfeld's words, "the greatest Jewish religious court in the world to-day." Apart from ecclesiastical and ritual work, it performs religious, educational, and social functions which give it a unique authority both within and without the community. Moreover, the revival of Jewish jurisprudence with the establishment of the State of Israel must serve to emphasise the significance of the contribution it can make to contemporary Jewish life. The fact that, after the war-time destruction of its former home, the London Beth Din will again be worthily housed must greatly enhance the community's dignity and prestige.

CONSULTATIVE STATUS

THE term "consultative status" represents one of the most hopeful developments in the betterment of international relationships. It is becoming increasingly realised that the work of governmental organisations in this sphere is insufficient by itself, and must be largely ineffective without the active collaboration of non-governmental bodies with expert knowledge in certain appropriate fields. The granting of consultative status to these bodies has been a particularly happy device for securing that wider network of human contacts and associations which can alone enable the official machinery to achieve the desired results. As is well known, several Jewish organisations have been among those granted such recognition by the United Nations Economic and Social Council (Ecosoc). And now there has been an extension of the same principle to the United Nations Educational, Scientific, and Cultural Organisation (Unesco). The Executive Board of Unesco has recommended that consultative status with Unesco be granted to the Agudas Israel World Organisation and to the United Jewish Educational and Cultural Organisation (Ujeco). In the official intimation of this decision, the hope is expressed that co-operation will be close and continuous. Lively satisfaction must be felt at the prospect now opened up, which will be of mutual benefit to Unesco and to the Jewish bodies concerned. On several occasions we have called attention in these columns to the vital importance of Unesco's work, which is concerned with the moral, spiritual, and intellectual foundations of world peace. To support such work is an obligation upon all Jews who are mindful of their religious mission. The two Jewish organisations which have now been invited to participate in this noble enterprise will be enabled to serve simultaneously their own people and humanity. Both Agudas Israel and Ujeco (the latter under its recently appointed Director, the Rev. Joseph Halpern) should be enheartened in their endeavours. Unesco has decided to hold its next general session in Beirut in November, and the attendance of Jewish representatives with a consultative status will be a timely proof of Jewish support.

AT HARROW

THE consecration of the new premises of the Young Judeans at Harrow, a report of which appears on page 18, marks the completion of a notable undertaking. The famous Harrow School had at one time a Jewish House and has long been attended by individual Jewish pupils, but until comparatively recently there was no resident population or organised community of Jews in the district. Nearly 90 years ago, indeed, the name at least became familiar to Metropolitan Jewry with the establishment of the Bayswater Synagogue, just off the well-known Harrow Road. No one, however, could then have envisaged the extension of the United Synagogue to Harrow itself. But the expansion of Jewry to the suburbs and beyond has kept pace with that of the general community. Just 30 years ago, the Harrow Hebrew Congregation was founded, and shortly before the war a scheme for a permanent synagogue was inaugurated. In 1945, the synagogue in Vaughan Road was consecrated, and the Minister, the Rev. S. Rapoport, inducted into office. Among those present was the local M.P., and the active help of non-Jewish neighbours and friends has always been generously forthcoming. As is right in a growing congregation, a main feature has been the development of its youth activities. The Harrow Young Judeans have, since the war, made great progress and become fully established as members of the Harrow Youth Council and of the Association for Jewish Youth. Credit for this is due to the fostering care of the Synagogue's Board of Management, but no less praiseworthy has been the public-spirited assistance of the local non-Jewish authorities. As Miss Anderson, the Harrow Youth Officer, pointed out at last Sunday's ceremony, they knew that the Judeans were youngsters of whom the borough could be proud, and realised that lack of adequate premises was impeding the club's fine work. Warm-hearted tribute should be paid to the Education Board of the Middlesex County Council, who have met the whole cost of building the new premises and proved themselves to be understanding and sympathetic friends of the Harrow Young Judeans. Such action as this affords a splendid example of good citizenship in practice.

PSYCHOLOGY OF ANTI-SEMITISM

THE official announcement at the last Board of Deputies' meeting that the social scientist is to take part in the fight against anti-Semitism immediately, by preparing a pilot survey with special reference to the factors that make for or exacerbate Jew-hatred, may prove to be an important step forward in Jewish anti-defamation work, provided that it is not simply the preliminary to another "poll" of "public opinion." Controversy must always surround the figures or percentages produced by such polls, for they cannot, by their nature, be as scientifically precise as, say, mathematical equations or chemical formulae. Too many intangibles affect the thoughts or emotions of human beings to allow for incontrovertible sums to be calculated about them. Even one day's events may swing opinion into totally different channels, and what is true of one period of circumstance is not necessarily true of others. There is always a tremendous element of chance in choosing small, selected groups for catechising, and too often the bluntly framed question is likely to produce the answer which the person interviewed thinks is wanted rather than what he honestly believes. Such responses as those recently described by Dr. H. J. Eysenck, in his paper on "The Psychology of Anti-Semitism," read before the British Association, may be open to such criticism, especially when they appear to give the horrific total of 47 per cent of a "typical middle-class English group" as having the lowest possible opinion of Jews. There is, however, another aspect to the psychological study of anti-Semitism, which Dr. Eysenck further dealt with: the more indirect approach which studies mental attitudes in general and thereby is able to relate them to more particular attitudes. In this connection, he was able to say that certain tests had shown "a surprisingly high correlation . . . between neuroticism and anti-Semitism." It is probably in the pursuit of such studies, rather than in the catching of the "floating vote" of opinion, that the social scientist will present his best work in the struggle to eradicate a notorious evil.

FESTIVAL ORIGINS

The Jewish New Year Festival: Its Origins and Development. By NORMAN H. SNAITH. S.P.C.K. 13s. 6d.

Reviewed by the Rev. Dr. H. DANBY

Recent writers on the Psalms and Old Testament religion generally have much to say about "Enthronement" or "Coronation" Psalms (meaning, particularly, Psalms 47, 93, 95-99, where conspicuous use is made of the metaphor of the Lord being "King"). The theory, now some 30 years old, is that these Psalms were used at some stage in Jewish history as liturgical elements in the New Year Festival, a Festival whose climax was a dramatic representation of the enthronement of the King—God—such as we find in the Babylonian New Year liturgies.

It is true that Hebrew writings are silent about any such ceremony in Israel. But, in the light of the prevalent Myth-Ritual-Pattern theory, which finds a correspondence of religious notions and practices throughout ancient Western Asia, the presumption is that if we find such-and-such a ceremonial in one centre (say, Babylon) we should be on the alert for evidence of a similar ceremonial elsewhere (say, Jerusalem). And such evidence, it is claimed, we do find in Psalm 47: this not only acclaims the "enthronement of the Deity," but it is specifically associated with the New Year in the synagogue liturgy, and to clinch all the Divine Kingship is one of the special notes struck in the New Year prayers.

All the Material

This theory, which is associated with the names of Paul Volz and Siegfried Mowinckel, has permeated Old Testament studies: few scholars have wholly accepted it, but no one has hitherto thoroughly scrutinised it or analysed it. It is such a scrutiny which Mr. Snaith has here attempted. He goes over all the material available bearing on the New Year, in pre-Exilic and post-Exilic times, both in Israel and in Babylon, he examines the associations which gathered round the First of Tishri, the Synagogue use of the so-called "Coronation Psalms," the Babylonian New Year and Enthronement ceremonies, their character and their date. He effectively shows the weakness of the assumption that the Babylonian use (evidence for it comes principally from the time of Nebuchadnezzar) could have influenced the Jews after the Exile; while the Jewish association of the New Year with the Divine Kingship is not traceable earlier than the century which followed the Destruction of the Second Temple.

MAHATMA GANDHI

In the Path of Mahatma Gandhi. By GEORGE CATLIN. Macdonald. 15s.

Reviewed by HENRY S. L. POLAK

Professor George Catlin in this book has set out to answer the question: By what rule should a man in these years best live his life? It is autobiographical and at the same time a philosophic quest, in which the author has found his hero-saint in Gandhi. He met Gandhi five times, the last occasion being within two months of his assassination.

Interestingly, the author suggests that the great Indian sage may well have been the messenger of the Western ideas of Tolstoy and Ruskin to the East as well as of India's philosophy to the world at large. Possibly Professor Catlin may have overlooked the fact that, at a certain crisis in one's life, inner concepts crystallise and take shape or are fortified by outer contacts.

Natural Non-Violence

Both Tolstoy and Gandhi were ex-soldiers (Gandhi as an ambulance-corps leader) who had reacted against their unhappy experiences in war-time. But, whatever may have been the inner urge of Tolstoy, in Gandhi's case it is to be remembered that he came from a traditionally non-military Hindu caste, who would not kill even for food, and he expressed himself as a man of natural non-violent tendencies. Similarly, while Ruskin's attitude to the "simple life" and social equalitarianism was as much intellectual as emotional, Gandhi had, from his earliest days, been familiar with the village life and the caste-duties of a Hindu. Hence, Ruskin struck a note which spontaneously recalled to Gandhi the early Hindu philosophy of caste-duty and community-service. Again, when Thoreau, who was a third influence upon Gandhi, wrote from gaol on "The Duty of Civil Disobedience," a copy of which came into Gandhi's hands when he had already launched his great "passive resistance" (satyagraha) campaign in South Africa and had become a prisoner for his part in it, the American's arguments came to encourage and emphasise something in Gandhi's philosophy and technique already in operation.

But, as Professor Catlin rightly says, Gandhi was a world-teacher and not merely a saintly Hindu. This is a book of real importance to all interested in India and in Gandhi's life and message. The world needs to have the elements of greater harmony, and they are to be found here.

MESSAGE AND SYMBOLISM OF ROSH HASHANA

By Rabbi Dr. S. M. LEHRMAN

THE message of Rosh Hashana is less for the nation than for the individual, whom it urges to cease from the folly of sin and to turn his gaze instead upon the realities of life. This independence of historical or national significance makes it the most universal as well as the most personal of all celebrations.

The Bible (which usually gives the reason of every observance) does not do so in the case of Rosh Hashana, deeming the spiritual well-being of each individual too obvious to require comment. To subsequent teachers we owe the picture of a Day of Judgment, on which all pass before the heavenly throne to give account of their deeds and to receive the promise of mercy if a conscientious effort is made to tread "the ways of pleasantness" mapped out by Judaism.

Weighing of Man's Deeds

A further spur to the task of self-scrutiny which this festival must inspire is the Zodiac sign for Tishri—the Scales (Libra)—symbolic of the weighing of each man's deeds before their recording in the heavenly book of Account. Primitive as it may at first sight appear, there is something appealing about a day upon which an annual inventory, so to speak, is taken of man's actions, and on which his means of sustenance for the coming year are apportioned.

A festival of so religious a nature requires long preparation in order to attune the spirit with the Infinite; and, with this object, the Shofar is sounded during the whole month of Ellul immediately after the morning service. The blowing of the Shofar—which receives support also from the Psalmist (תקעו בחדש שופר)—is the subject of a legend. Immediately after Revelation, on Sivan 7, Moses ascended Sinai a second time in order to receive a detailed explanation of the Decalogue. At the end of forty days, he came down, only to find that in his absence the people had made a Golden Calf. According to the legend, this day happened to be Tammuz 17, and, in consequence, the fast we have to this day was ordained. After the people had acknowledged their guilt, Moses was determined to obtain Divine forgiveness for them. Ascending the mount a third time—this happened to be on Ellul 1—he commanded that a Shofar be blown each day to remind the people of Revelation, whereon it was commanded that no graven image be made. After forty days of pleading with God, he came down on Tishri 10—the day fixed for Atonement—with the message of forgiveness.

Judaism, with its insight into human psychology and its desire to intensify prayerfulness, has appointed a definite season for introspection, when man can live spiritually on a higher plane. The Ten Days of Repentance by no means exclude the attempt that should be made each day to lead the saintly life. To inspire the penitent mood, special supplications are added to the ordinary morning prayers. These are usually begun on the Sunday before Rosh Hashana, or on the previous Sunday should the New Year fall on a Monday or Tuesday. The numerical value of the letters לעמוד לסליחות ("arising for Selichot") and אתם נצבים היום, the opening words of the Sidra read before the New Year, both equal 694. There are many congregations which to this day have the more impressive custom of reciting the Selichot at midnight of the Sabbath before New Year. One who has witnessed this midnight scene, at a season when, according to popular belief, even "the fish in the waters tremble," can testify to what an abiding memory it has become, and what a spur to righteousness.

Selichot

The contents of these Selichot are strung together from many Biblical passages which stress the readiness of God to forgive. Their early origin is proved by the fact that two of the most important—the אל מלך יושב and the מי שענה—receive mention in the Mishna. So popular did these Selichot become that some like שומר ישראל, were included in the daily liturgy, and אל ארך אפים on Mondays and Thursdays, while the most famous of all—the אב הרחמים—was reserved for Sabbath. Most of these Selichot were composed during the Crusades, that inferno of Jewish suffering, which began in 1096, when Peter the Hermit headed a procession of 200,000 of "the most stupid and savage refuse of people, who mingled with devotion the brutal licence of rapine, prostitution, and drunkenness." Contemporary historians have estimated that in the cities of the Rhine alone over 12,000 Jews were killed between May and July of the year 1096. Can one wonder why the main theme of these penitential prayers is of oppression, and martyrdom, and exile—the vanity of earthly life and the glory of the future?

The Four Letters of Ellul

The four letters of the word אלול yield a variety of ingenious meanings. They are said to spell the four words from Canticles: אני לדודי ודודי לי, referring to the love of Israel for his God and of God for Israel. Or, reserving the first letter (Aleph) for the end and making it stand for Amen, the other three letters denote: לחיים ולא למות "for life and not for death," לברכה ולא לקללה "for a blessing and not for curse."—the answer for which we pray during the whole month.

Many reasons have been advanced for the recital of Psalm xxvii during the whole month and until the seventh day of Tabernacles. The word לולא therein is but Ellul spelt in reverse, and, moreover, the four letters of the word ארי in a previous verse stand for אלול, ראש השנה, יום כפור, הושענה רבא. The opening words of this Psalm, "The Lord is my Light and my Salvation," refer respectively to New Year (Light), Atonement (Salvation), and Hoshana Rabba. It is also the custom to conclude letters to friends during the whole of Ellul with the wishes for a good year to come.

Five names have been given to Rosh Hashana, of which only two are in the Bible. These are זכרון תרועה (Lev. xxiii, 24) and יום תרועה (Num. xxix, 1), both of which refer to the sounds of the Shofar. Our liturgy has added another two: the "Day of Judgment" and the "Day of Memorial."

ANGLO-JEWISH PORTRAITS

By SALLON

Dayan L. Abramsky

Member of the London Beth Din

THE BETH DIN (COURT OF THE CHIEF RABBI)

By Dayan Dr. I. GRUNFELD

THE Beth Din as an historical institution is deeply rooted in the life and thought of the Jewish people. It has always been the real centre of Jewish existence as long as the cultural autonomy of the Jews remained unbroken.

According to Jewish tradition, the existence of the Beth Din goes back to the very beginning of our Faith. Talmudic sources mention the Beth Din of Shem, of Moses, Gideon, and Samuel. Maimonides, in his Introduction to the Yad Hachazakah, speaks of Elijah and his Beth Din, Isaiah and his Beth Din, Jeremiah and his Beth Din, etc. So deeply has the conception of the Beth Din become ingrained in the soul of our people that the Talmud, and especially the Jewish mystics, often speak of the Heavenly Beth Din, "the Beth Din on High," to which the Beth Din on earth corresponds. (Compare also the introductory formula to our Kol Nidré Service.)

This central position of the Beth Din, "the House of Law," is not surprising, for it is intimately connected with the conception of Judaism as a religion of law. To the Jew, God is not only the Creator of the Universe, but also the Universal Lawgiver; and religion, therefore, is to our people not so much a mystical feeling towards the Unknown as obedience to the laws of God. Nothing is more alien to the spirit of the Torah than the splitting of life into departments religious and secular, which in the end must lead to the reduction of religion into just another section of life and the exclusion of the Divine from the realms of daily existence.

The Mishna

The Mishna, the classical code of traditional Jewish Law, covers, therefore, all spheres of human activity: it deals with prayers and temple service, laws of agriculture, purchase and sale, constitutional law and commercial law, with marriage and family laws, the festivals, and laws of purity in a physical and spiritual sense. Thus, Jewish religious law covers all the activities of man, from prayer and meditation to social, state, and business life; and that is why in Israel law and religion are inseparably interwoven, why the Beth Din, the Jewish Court of Law, has always been the real centre of Jewish life.

As the Beth Din in general accompanied the rise of Judaism, so has the London Beth Din marched with the rise of the Anglo-Jewish Community. The Jews of England in the pre-Expulsion period had a sort of legal autonomy, a "separate jurisdiction of the Jews inter se," which was confirmed by public charter in the reign of King Richard I; and it is assumed that the name "Curia Judaica" in the Plea rolls and other legal documents refers to the Beth Din (see H. D. Davis, "Hebrew Deeds of English Jews"; H. P. Stokes, "Studies in Anglo-Jewish History"; A. Feldman, "The London Beth Din").

In 1928, the senior Dayan of the London Beth Din, Dr. A. Feldman, wrote: "According to the testimonies of visitors from other countries who have seen it at work, the London Beth Din in its organisation and labours occupies a unique place among the Botei Din in the European countries."

Since 1933, when the destruction of Continental Jewry and their Botei Din began, the functions of the London Beth Din have increased to such an extent that it is in status as well as in bulk of work the greatest Jewish religious court in the world to-day. It has to care not only for the religious needs of the British and Empire Jewries, but has also had to take over to a large extent the functions of the destroyed European Botei Din.

Three Main Functions

The functions of the London Beth Din can be divided into three categories: judicial, advisory, and cultural.

In the first, or judicial category, apart from being constantly called upon to answer Shaaloth, i.e., to interpret questions of Jewish Law affecting the individual as well as the community, the Dayanim act as judges in cases which would come normally within the purview of a magistrate's court, a county court, or a high court. Thus, they deal with cases concerning husband and wife, parents and children, breaches of promise, unfriendly neighbours, petty slander, master and servant, landlord and tenant; with commercial cases of vendor and purchaser, sale of land, partnerships, limited companies, claims for commission, questions of wills and legacies, etc.

In this sphere, the Beth Din acts as a Court of Arbitration, which derives its legal power in civil law from the Arbitration Act. The parties sign an undertaking to submit their case to the arbitration of the Beth Din and to abide by its decision. The awards of the Beth Din then become enforceable in civil law. Apart from this sanction of civil law, there is, however, a much more powerful sanction at the disposal of the Beth Din—the moral force of Jewish religious law and conscience. Without the force of police and subpœna, the Beth Din summons is a powerful call, and there are few Jews in this country who would ignore it. This voluntary submission, without external compulsion, to the call of a time-honoured Jewish institution is, I believe, of inestimable moral and educational value in the life of our people.

To-day, a great part of the Beth Din's time is taken up by divorce proceedings (Gittin). These are undertaken, with rare exceptions, only after the decree of divorce has been made absolute in the civil courts. The number of Jewish divorces has greatly increased since the war. The amount of preliminary work attached to each Get is enormous. As a rule, financial disputes between husband and wife have to be settled before the divorce proceedings can start; and often one side or the other has to be persuaded of the necessity to give a Get in order to dissolve a marriage in Jewish Law and to avoid a possible everlasting stain on any future offspring.

The functioning of the Beth Din as a divorce court is not confined to this country. Never before in Jewish history have persecution and migration of Jewry caused such an upheaval in Jewish family life and relationships as in our days. As far as divorces are concerned, there is a high percentage of such cases where one of the parties resides abroad. The first aim then is to find his or her whereabouts, and only the world-wide connections of the London Beth Din make this often very difficult task possible. The documents have then to be sent overseas, which, of course, means a more complicated procedure. In commercial cases, too, it often happens that one of the parties concerned lives abroad, so that the Beth Din acts as a sort of international court of law. Some of these cases deal with questions of inheritance and the distribution among the remnants of persecuted Jewish families of such assets as may have survived destruction.

Wide Purview

Within the functions of the Beth Din as a judiciary also come those cases where butchers and licensed restaurants, etc., are brought before the Court for breaches of the laws of Kashrut. Of judicial character, too, is the admission of proselytes, which entails many interviews of a complicated and intimate character. And there are finally the various disputes arising out of congregational organisation and administration which call for the decision of the Beth Din.

The aim of its jurisdiction in all these cases is peace and equity (Yosher) as enjoined in the Biblical injunctions, "truth and the judgment of peace shalt thou effect in thy gates," and "thou shalt do what is equitable and good in the eyes of the Lord." It is obvious that the reason why more and more people resort to the Beth Din for the resolving of their disputes is that they rightly feel that the

JEWISH BLIND SOCIETY

To the Editor of THE JEWISH CHRONICLE

From Mr. JAMES A. De ROTHSCHILD

SIR,—May I, on the occasion of the approaching High Festivals, when the mind of the Jewish Community is turned from more mundane matters, appeal to the charity of your readers for further support of the Jewish Blind Society?

Over 400 sightless people are registered with us, all of whom want help in some way or other. Some need to be entirely cared for in our homes, others should receive financial assistance, and still others urgently require material help of some kind. Our aim is that not one single Jewish blind person should lack such care and comfort as it is humanly possible to provide. But we are handicapped by lack of funds.

Some three years ago, we launched an appeal for £100,000; of this, £53,000 have been generously subscribed. We are now looking forward confidently to the remaining £47,000 being given to us in the same spirit of compassion and רחמנות.

Our new home, Rokefield, near Dorking, has recently been opened, but we are able to house there only a small proportion of the needy blind people who are constantly applying for our help. Plans for building on to the existing structure have been submitted to the Ministry of Health, and licences have recently been granted by the Minister of Works.

When Rokefield was first consecrated, Dayan Lazarus described our Society as "Eyes to the Blind." This is true, but only partially. I pray we may be able soon to extend the range of this vicarious vision, and hope that your readers will come to our aid in this decent task of bringing a little light into many darkened lives.

JAMES A. DE ROTHSCHILD,
President, Jewish Blind Society.

RELIGION SHOULD UNIFY MANKIND

Chief Rabbi Replies to Archbishop

[From our Correspondent—MANCHESTER]

In an address at the Great Synagogue, during his visit to Manchester over the week-end, the Chief Rabbi called on the nations to cease committing acts contrary to the laws of God and man, acts which, if not checked, might prove disastrous to the world.

There were certain factors common to all religions, said Rabbi Brodie, such as the recognition of the fatherhood of God and the consequent kinship of all men. Religion should be the unifier of mankind.

Dealing with a statement by the Archbishop of York (reported on page 5 under "Parliament"), the Chief Rabbi said: "He has succumbed to the fatal habit of condemning a whole people for the sins of a few individuals. He has asserted that we Jews are uncivilised until we can extirpate the evil people who have unfortunately been responsible for acts which bring shame to us. That method of approach is one which one does not expect from a dignitary of the church, and certainly not from one of such high standing as the Archbishop of York."

Religion, went on Rabbi Brodie, must express itself always, and in spite of provocation, in terms of love, in terms of justice, in terms of sympathy, and in terms of understanding.

The service at the Great Synagogue was attended by the Lord Mayor of Manchester and the Lady Mayoress and the civic heads of Salford, Prestwich, and Swinton and Pendlebury. The Communal Rabbi, Dr. A. Altmann, officiated, and the service was conducted by Cantor M. Perlmann.

At a reception, following the service, at the Cheetham Assembly Rooms, where Councillor Leslie Lever welcomed the Chief Rabbi and Mrs. Brodie and the civic representatives, the Lord Mayor of Manchester said: "On behalf of the City of Manchester, I welcome the Chief Rabbi to our midst. I hope we will work together for the peace and prosperity of all."

The Chief Rabbi had earlier attended a service at the South Manchester Congregation where he consecrated the Roll of Honour of World War II. The service was conducted by the Rev. Felix Carlebach and the Rev. S. Morris, and Mr. L. Kirk unveiled the Roll of Honour.

Rabbi Brodie said that he was pleased to recall the spirit of Jewishness shown by our boys and girls during the war. The generation of to-day had a sound Jewish heart.

The Chief Rabbi spoke on the social character of the synagogue at the reconsecration of the Higher Broughton Synagogue on Sunday evening. Dr. Altmann delivered the Prayer of Consecration, and Rabbi B. M. Casper and the Rev. S. Hershman were the officiating clergy, assisted by the choir under Mr. F. Gonski. The synagogue was opened by Mr. A. Nadler.

On Friday evening, the Chief Rabbi preached at the Holy Law Synagogue, and on Sabbath morning at the Higher Crumpsall Synagogue. In the afternoon, he attended a Youth Oneg Shabbat at the Higher Crumpsall Synagogue Hall, and in the evening, Mincha and Maariv at the Central Synagogue, where he delivered an address.

On Monday, Rabbi Brodie visited the Manchester Yeshiva, and later, accompanied by members of a reception committee, proceeded to the Town Hall, where they were received by the Lord Mayor, Miss Mary Kingsmill-Jones, O.B.E.

The party next visited the Homes for the Aged, where the Chief Rabbi toured the wards and shook hands with each of the guests. At the main branch of the Talmud Torah schools in Bent Street, the Chief Rabbi joined the children in the singing of Hebrew songs. Later, he addressed a meeting of delegates of the Shechita Board, and, finally, attended the annual meeting of the Keren Havesod at Mamlock House.

The Jewish women's organisation entertained Mrs. Brodie to dinner at the Holme in Prestwich on Monday. Mrs. Brodie gave an address on "Anglo-Jewish Womanhood and its contributions to Jewish life past and present."

Archbishop's Comment

In a message to the MANCHESTER GUARDIAN, following the Chief Rabbi's criticism, the Archbishop of York, Dr. Garbutt, declares that in his House of Lords statement he was casting no reflection upon the Jewish people in general, but was speaking only of the Jews of Palestine.

SYMBOL OF FRIENDSHIP

After the Rev. P. Selvin Goldberg, as guest preacher during the Sunday evening service at the Platt Unitarian Chapel, Manchester, had spoken on "Jewish Contributions to Civilisation," and a discussion had taken place the Rev. C. J. Piper, Minister of the Congregation, publicly shook hands with him as a symbol of friendship, an act which was loudly applauded by the whole of the congregation.

CHILDWALL CLASSES

[From our Correspondent—LIVERPOOL]

Zena Seigle (Liverpool Girls' College) and Joseph Wiseman (The Holt), who have passed in Hebrew in the School Certificate examinations of the Northern Universities, are both pupils of the Childwall Hebrew Congregational Classes. The new class for those taking the examination in 1949 is now being formed, and those who are interested are asked to communicate with the Superintendent of the classes, the Rev. S. Segal.

Sixty-seven boys and 56 girls are now attending the Childwall Classes. The Kindergarten class for children aged between four and six meets every Sunday morning.

GIRLS' CONSECRATION SERVICE

[From our Correspondent—SHEFFIELD]

The first service of its kind arranged in Sheffield was held on Sunday at the Wilson Road Synagogue, when five girls, Carole Kreike, Stella Cohen, Ena Cohen, Valerie Cohen, and Rose Braunold, took part in a consecration service conducted by Rabbi E. Wiesenberg.

A reception was later held in the Synagogue Hall, where the gathering was addressed by Rabbi Lapian, the headmaster, and Mr. A. Krausz, President of the Sheffield Hebrew Education Board. Illuminated certificates were presented to the graduates and all children attending the classes were entertained to tea.

EDUCATION AFTER BARMITZVAH

[From our Correspondent—LEEDS]

At a meeting of the Council of the Leeds Talmud Torah, over which Mr. Maurice Share presided, Dr. J. J. Slotki, Education Officer, raised the question of the education of boys after Barmitzvah.

Hitherto, said Dr. Slotki, these boys had failed to avail themselves of the facilities offered for further education. It was essential that every effort should be made to retain pupils till they were 14 or 15.

In America, the problem was being tackled with some success. The practice had been adopted in several schools of giving a reception every six months to boys for some time after Barmitzvah, to impress upon them the necessity of continued education. It was not sufficient to attract the post-Barmitzvah group, said the speaker; the need of keeping them was even greater. For this, it was essential to have suitable teachers, adequate premises, and varied and interesting activities.

Mr. H. C. Shaffner reported on the Congregational Educational Levy, and stated that substantial progress had been made in enlisting the interest of a number of synagogues and individuals.

HULL BETH HAMEDRASH EXTENSION

[From our Correspondent—HULL]

A representative gathering of Hull Jews attended the opening ceremony of the extension of the Beth Hamedrash, Osborne Street.

Mr. D. M. Rosen, who declared the Beth Hamedrash open, was presented with the key by Mr. I. Bentley, one of the oldest members, who recalled the building of the Old Hebrew Synagogue 45 years ago.

Since the 1940 blitz, when the synagogue was destroyed, the Beth Hamedrash has been used as a place of worship by the congregation. But the seating capacity has been inadequate. Now, with the additional accommodation, 350 can be seated.

Mr. L. Rapstone, President, said he hoped that if the Town Planning Committee agreed it would not be long before the Old Hebrew Synagogue itself could be rebuilt on its original site.

The officiating clergy at the ceremony were the Revs. D. Hirsch, J. Levinson, J. Freedberg, and H. Davies. The address was given by the Rev. D. Hirsch, of the Western Synagogue, who in surveying the communal activities in the city, commented on the harmonious way in which the congregations worked together.

The Ark was the gift of Mr. and Mrs. L. Rapstone, and the curtains were presented by Mr. and Mrs. Israel Levy.

GLASGOW ZIONISTS' RESOLUTION

[From our Correspondent—GLASGOW]

Mr. Ralph Harris, Joint Vice-Chairman of the Glasgow Zionist Organisation, spoke about his recent visit to Israel when he addressed the annual meeting of the organisation, held at the Jewish Institute.

Mr. L. Wolfson, who presided, submitted a resolution (which was unanimously approved, greeting the Prime Minister and Government of Israel; pledging support for the task of consolidation which lies ahead; and praying for a speedy and lasting peace, and for the restoration of the traditional friendship between the people of Great Britain and world Jewry.

Mr. Wolfson thanked all his colleagues on the Executive and Committee for their loyal co-operation.

Mr. W. D. Shapiro, Treasurer, reported that the membership had increased to 450.

The following were elected: Messrs. F. Nettler, J.P., Hon. President; A. Links, J. Levy, and M. Glasser, Hon. Vice-Presidents; L. Wolfson, President; E. Wolfson, Chairman; T. Tate, Vice-Chairman; L. Cina, Treasurer; and W. Golombok, Secretary.

NEWCASTLE AID FOR DEFENCE APPEAL

[From our Correspondent—NEWCASTLE]

A meeting of the Representative Council for Newcastle Jewry presided over by Mr. L. Myers, decided to launch an appeal for £2,500 in support of the Defence Appeal of the Board of Deputies. The Council expressed its appreciation to Mr. Sheperd, the non-Jewish proprietor of the Heaton Assembly Rooms, for allowing the free use of his hall for communal purposes.

BRADFORD EDUCATIONAL EFFORT

[From our Correspondent—BRADFORD]

The Chairman of the Congregation's Education Committee, Mr. M. Nisse, presided over a meeting of parents last week, when he and Mr. J. Rivlin, Hon. Secretary of the Committee, outlined a "new approach" to the work of the Synagogue Classes.

Voluntary teachers with professional experience are, in collaboration with the headmaster and assistant teacher, to put into effect a curriculum embracing the essentials of Jewish education.

Both speakers pleaded for the support of parents; and the Rev. J. Israelstam said that their success depended on the parents giving their children to the teachers for a sufficient number of hours per week and for a sufficient number of years.

Mr. M. Brown, President, Mr. H. Shaffner, Warden, and Mr. S. Levin, Joint Hon. Secretary of the Congregation, welcomed the new Education Committee and promised their support.

BELFAST—The Literary Section of the Jewish Institute has resumed activities under the chairmanship of Miss Judith B. Rosenfield. For the opening meeting there was a talk on "Ballet," by Major E. Derrington, of the International Ballet Company.

BIRMINGHAM—Speaking at a meeting of the Birmingham Cultural Society at the Imperial Hotel, Mr. Ivan Greenberg said that his recent visit to Israel had convinced him that the Jewish people were the most magnificent people in the world. But their Government, which was definitely a provisional one, was not "first class." It had made many mistakes, notably the agreement to the second truce, at a time when the invading armies could have been swept from Israel. Mr. B. Winter presided.

BLACKPOOL—The Jewish Social Club and Youth Centre entertained 54 old people from the Manchester Jewish Old Aged Home recently. A lunch, coach drive, tea, and concert were provided. The expenses of the treat came from a fund of over £100 raised at a dance held by the Club.

HIGH WYCOMBE—The Jewish Ladies' Guild at their annual meeting held at 7, Queen Square, elected Mrs. A. Marks, Chairman; Mrs. R. Sumray, Vice-Chairman; Mrs. R. Crook, Treasurer; and Mrs. D. Margolin, Secretary.

PRESTON—The Preston Committee of the Joint Palestine Appeal has collected over £420.

SWANSEA—Mr. Elsley Zeitlyn gave an address on the Deputies' Defence Appeal at the Synagogue Hall. Mr. I. H. Benjamin, Swansea representative at the Deputies, presided, and appealed for support of the Defence Fund. A substantial sum was raised. A further meeting is to be called to elect a Swansea Defence Committee.

EIRE NEWS

DUBLIN—Under the title of "Jubal's Lyre," the fourth in a series of broadcasts of Jewish music will be given over Radio Eireann on the evening of tomorrow week. It will comprise "A Symphony of the High Holy-days." In addition, there will be a talk on "The High Holy-days" by Rabbi J. J. Kokotek.

NEW YEAR ACROSTIC: 5709 – התש"ט

"The Year of Revival"

By Dr. JUDAH J. SLOTKI

(I)

THE following acrostic consists of eight stanzas, each beginning with a successive letter of the words ספר זכרון the Hebrew name of THE JEWISH CHRONICLE. The first letters in each of the second, third, and fourth lines combine to form the anagram תש"ט, the number of the New Year in accordance with the פרט קטן. The numerical value of the whole of each stanza is 5709, the פרט גדול of the New Year. Finally, the last letters of the first lines in the eight stanzas combine to make up the words שנת התחיה "the year of the Revival." The theme of the acrostic is the newly-formed State of Israel.

MESSAGE TO THE MINISTRY

In the course of his "Message to the Anglo-Jewish Ministry," the Chief Rabbi writes that he has "been greatly affected and encouraged by the sentiments of goodwill and loyalty which you were good enough to express to me. . . . I am grateful for these expressions of friendship, and I trust that mutual confidence and helpfulness will characterise our relationship in the future. I pray that the Almighty will bless our efforts in our sacred tasks. . . .

"We are the guardians of fundamental teachings about God and man. These teachings must interpenetrate our lives. They are the standards by which our conduct in its entirety should be judged and regulated. We must therefore guard against the unashamed secularism and materialism of the age which have made inroads into the Jewish way of living and thinking, have seeped into our synagogues, and cheapened some of our pulpits. The implied criticism in what I have just said does not, of course, exclude the occasional comment from the pulpit upon political, social, and even economic issues which vitally affect the modern world. It certainly does not suggest the suppression of opinion on pressing matters affecting the situation of the Jews in this country, Israel and elsewhere. These, and many other related problems, are legitimate themes for reference and exposition in the synagogue; but in the treatment of them we have constantly to remind ourselves that we are in a synagogue, which still remains a House of Prayer and Torah. . . .

Airing Views

"I feel so strongly that the pulpit should not be abused by any of us; nor should we indeed permit people to think that it is a convenient vantage-point from which to air views which have nothing sacred about them.

"I want, however, to appeal to you to find opportunity during the Solemn Days to direct the minds and hearts of your congregation also to specific religious themes which intimately affect their personal lives. . . . We know what the Jewish home has meant in the preservation of Israel's physical and spiritual health. We are also aware of the havoc that has ravaged its sanctity and strength in recent years . . . Now, more than ever in this post-war period of disquietude and challenge, is the time to expound from the pulpit the sacredness of the Jewish home and the blessedness of Jewish family life."

PROBLEM OF JEWISH EDUCATION

Dr. N. Morris Speaks of his 40 Years' Experience

[By a JEWISH CHRONICLE Reporter]

Dr. Nathan Morris, whose 40 years' connection with Jewish education in the United Kingdom is now ending with his departure for Palestine, spoke to me of his experiences of, and views on, Jewish education before he left.

One of the most pressing of to-day's problems, he believes, is the necessary switch-over in our educational orientation from Eastern Europe to Palestine.

"Hitherto our inspiration as well as many of our teachers, textbooks, and methods, came very largely, if not exclusively, from the great centres of learning in Eastern and Central Europe," said Dr. Morris. "These centres have been lost in the tragedy that overwhelmed European Jewry. In the future it will need to lean more and more closely on the new great centre now being built up in Palestine. But it is essential to build educational bridges between the Jewish State and the Diaspora. This will be the function of the World Union for Hebrew Education. Its programme includes the introduction throughout the Diaspora of the 'Diploma of Proficiency' in Hebrew to be granted by the Hebrew University jointly with the World Union; the organisation of supplementary training in Jerusalem of Jewish teachers from all over the world; annual refresher courses for Jewish teachers and youth leaders; periodical consultations; and the supply of educational material. A British section of the World Union has already been established, and one may look forward with some confidence to new and interesting educational developments in the near future."

Synagogue Classes

Another problem now is the synagogue class, said Dr. Morris. "Talmud Torahs have gone down to a stage where one must be seriously concerned over their future. But the synagogue class suffers from short hours; from the fact that its teaching is done at the wrong end of the day, and in most cases also at the wrong time of life. There is no recognised entrance age to the synagogue class, children starting at any age, and almost all leaving immediately after Barmitzvah. I doubt whether any progress is possible in the cramped condition of this type of class. There are two remedies. First the establishment of the Hebrew High School which would admit pupils as a result of a test at the age of 12 and keep them at least to the age of 17, giving them some eight hours a week tuition with Hebrew as the medium of instruction. The other remedy is the introduction of Hebrew as first or second foreign language in State secondary schools, where it would get five to six periods a week. A successful attempt in this direction has already been made in Glasgow.

"The main obstacles to the suggested remedies is the lack of trained teachers. The failure to create an Institute of Jewish Education is a matter of the gravest moment to our community.

"The most important educational development of the last 40 years," he said, "is the complete switch-over from individual or sectional responsibility to that of public management and control. In London and in major Provincial centres there are now communal Boards of Education at various stages on the way to centralisation. A very marked rise has taken place in the status of education and also in the position of the teacher, who is slowly—alas, much too slowly—reaching out towards that security which is the root of dignity." He recalled that his own salary as head of the Hebrew Higher Grade School in Glasgow in 1912—an Ivrit b'Ivrit School—was £2 a week.

Deterioration of Standard

"Yet the general standard of education during that period has deteriorated," he went on. "Hours had been reduced from 12 or 15 to an average of five to seven. The Ivrit b'Ivrit method, which was used in 1920 in schools catering for some 3,000 children, had almost completely disappeared. The only compensating development was the rise of youth movements, some of which carried out intensive cultural programmes, and in the past few years, under the stimulus of the idea of communal responsibility for education, serious efforts had been made to stem the downward trend through the communal Boards and also through the spread of the Day School Movement.

"One might say now," added Dr. Morris, "that we are again set on the road to progress. Yet, nothing much will be achieved until the radical faults in structure and methods of our education system are eliminated."

AT a meeting of the Golders Green Joint Committee for the Central British Fund, held at the Golders Green Synagogue, the arrangements for the bazaar, which is to take place on December 5 and 6, at the Joseph Freedman Hall, were discussed. It was announced that many gifts had already been received.

RECIPE FOR PEACE . . . You may smoke because you have nothing better to do—in which case it doesn't matter what you smoke. But if you would break a habit and acquire a taste you will seek the complete satisfaction that belongs only to the finest Turkish leaf . . . You begin by choosing Turkish for the special occasion; you continue to smoke less because you enjoy more; you end in the devoted company of the discreet few to whom a cigarette is meaningless unless it is surnamed

MESSAGE OF ROSH HASHANA

The name by which it is most known—ראש השנה—is first found in the Mishna.

The selection of Tishri to usher in the period of self-examination seems the more natural on account of the current metamorphosis of nature. Between the shortening days at the end of summer and the pulling out of another year from our gradually diminishing bundle of life there is something akin. In the seventh month (Tishri), moreover, began the Jubilee year, when the Shofar proclaimed the manumission of slaves and the restoration of all property to its original owners. The Rabbis also believed that the Creation of the world, as well as some of the most important incidents in Israel's early history, took place in Tishri.

It would be fallacious to regard Rosh Hashana merely as a solemn occasion clouded by introspection, for it partakes also of the joyous nature which characterises the other observances of Judaism. Not only are greetings exchanged happily with our friends for "a good year," but we are expected to usher in the celebration with a joyous spirit. Nehemiah rebuked the exiles who returned to Palestine under the leadership of Zerubabel for weeping when they beheld the ruins of their homeland. That day, he reminded them, being the New Year, all things must assume a cheerful aspect, since God leaves the seat of strict judgment for the seat of mercy. The omission of the Hallel is not due to sadness, but to a chastening of our feelings, since our destinies hang in the balance, as it were, on this day.

The Talmud (Horayot 12a) mentions the custom of eating sweet foods for a "sweet" year, and the preference is for such dainties as are in abundance and whose names can be interpreted to mean forgiveness. Ezra advised the returned exiles to eat good things and to drink sweet wine on this festival. Our present custom of apples and honey was known in France in the twelfth century, where, in addition, the head of a calf was eaten—a prayer that Israel may be head among the nations. Sour or pickled things are eschewed as incongruous to the nature of the festival. The eating of nuts is avoided for the reason that the numerical value of אגוז (nut) equals that of חטא, with the omission of the last letter (א). The slightest reminder of sin must be shunned. Very prosaic, but more to the point, is the other reason for avoiding nuts: they produce a dryness of the throat and thus make loud prayer uncomfortable!

The loaves for this festival used to be baked in the shape of ladders as a symbol that God elevates and humiliates all the children of men. The blessing over the bread is followed by dipping the first morsel in honey and uttering the prayer for a good and sweet year. Many remain awake the first night reciting Psalms, in order to be in the right frame of mind the next day for prayer and penitence.

Sound of the Shofar

The most characteristic feature of the festival is the Shofar—that ancient symbol used to announce any important national event. The sound of the Shofar matches the solemnity of the day. A better symbol of the contrite heart could not have been devised. It is a bugle-call to the slumbering conscience and an appeal to the wayward disposition. The Zohar says that the Shofar bewilders and staggers Satan, who is thus made to think that the Messiah has come, when his powers cease to be. But the purpose of the Shofar has never been better explained than by Saadia Gaon and, later, by Maimonides: "Awake, ye sleepers, and ponder your deeds; remember your Creator and go back to Him in Penitence." The Shofar is sounded three times during the Morning Service, because thrice is the word "Teruah" mentioned in the Bible. (Lev. xxxiii, 24; xxv, 9; Num. xxix, 1). Since, each time, thirty sounds are made, the Shofar is usually blown a fourth time just before the conclusion of the service, in order to complete the number to a hundred. On a Sabbath, the Shofar is not blown, not because it was considered work, but because of the fear lest the blower carry it on that day to an expert for instruction in the art of blowing. Already in Gaonic times this fear excluded the Sabbath use of the Shofar.

Three Categories

Since the Shofar is so important, it is little to be wondered at that it occupies such an important position in the liturgy of the festival. In fact, the contents of our prayers that day easily fall into three categories. Those which stress the belief that God is King over all things are called "Malchuyot." Those reminding us of our misdeeds and appealing for divine mercy by the merits of our ancestors are known as "Zichronot"; while the third group—"Shofarot"—comfort us with the hope that, at the crack of doom, death will be swallowed up by life and peace everlasting.

The authorship of the prayer ונתנה תקף has been attributed to R. Amnon of Mayence, a man tortured during the Crusades for refusing to abandon the faith of his fathers. The story goes that with his dying breath he asked to be carried into the synagogue. It happened to be Rosh Hashana, when the place was thronged with worshippers. The Reader, who was about to recite the Kedusha, stopped, and R. Amnon then uttered the prayer we recite to this day. No sooner did he finish than he breathed his last. To this day, a solemn hush pervades the synagogue when the prayer is chanted.

Picturesque Ceremony

Perhaps the most picturesque ceremony connected with the festival is the "Tashlich." It is doubtful whether it existed earlier than the fourteenth century in Germany, since the first reference is in Jacob Molin's invaluable sources of all our ceremonial observances. The ceremony consists of going to the river bank on the afternoon of the first day (or on the second, should the first be a Sabbath), reciting some prayers, prominent among which were a few verses from Micah (viii, 19-20), from which the name "Tashlich" (casting) has been derived. To add a touch of colour to the proceedings some crumbs were thrown into the water. The milieu was chosen because of the purifying effect of water upon the body and for its suggestiveness of the religious atmosphere of the Beth Din, whose judges understand the psychology of the Jewish people and can appeal to disputants not to cause a Chillul Hashem and not to discredit the Jewish Community by unholy and unseemly actions or conduct, will often prove more effective than outside force.

The second broad category in the Beth Din's work is advisory and administrative. The aftermath of the war has brought upon us new social problems which are mirrored in the increased activity of the Beth Din, because all those problems finally affect Jewish home and family life. There are many cases concerning Jewish war widows and widowers where very difficult and intricate questions of Jewish family law have to be gone into. A particular anxiety is the problem of many Jewish men and women whose wives or husbands were killed in concentration camps and who want to marry again. It has proved impossible for the Registrar General of Marriages to investigate the evidence available of death in the Nazi extermination camps. The few eye-witnesses who have survived can often speak only Yiddish. The Government authorities have, therefore, left it to the Beth Din to investigate such cases before permission to marry under English law can be given. This is an extraordinary strain on the time and accommodation of the Beth Din. Apart from that, the Beth Din is frequently approached by various Government departments whose officials seek its advice and ruling in other domains of Jewish life and law. Moreover, there are very few Jewish organisations in the country or even abroad which, in some way or another, do not call on the services of the Beth Din, let alone those religious bodies which are constantly in close touch with it.

Kashrut

As far as religious administration is concerned, there is, above all, the administration of kashrut for several hundred butchers and kasher catering institutions in London as well as of hotels in the provinces, and the arduous task of supervising the baking of matzot for practically the whole community. The administration of kashrut is carried out in co-operation with the Board of Shechita and the Kashrus Commission.

Under the administrative category also comes the issue of certificates for government departments and individuals testifying to marriage and personal status in cases where Jewish people were born and married abroad and are unable, owing to various circumstances, to produce the necessary documents; the issue of certificates for old age and widows' pensions and for Jewish Friendly Societies, certificates required by the Ministry of Food, hechsherim for firms for Passover goods, and Kabbala for Shochetim, and other licences.

The daily post from overseas is exceptionally heavy, bringing inquiries from as far afield as India, South Africa, Australia, and New Zealand. That means heavy exchange of letters with rabbinical courts and authorities all over the world. There are scores of letters from camps in Germany, in both the American and British zones, which have to be answered. It is no exaggeration to say that the London Beth Din has become the "consulate" for thousands of men and women in Europe where family papers and legal relationships have suffered in the upheaval of the war and persecution.

Culture

Finally, although the main task of the Dayanim is to function as judges and interpreters of Jewish law, they are, nevertheless, as Rabbis intimately connected with the Chief Rabbinate, expected to take a part in the religious and cultural life of the Anglo-Jewish Community. The Dayanim, therefore, give lectures and Shiurim in various parts of Greater London. Often they are called away from the Beth Din on congregational or other urgent matters arising in London or in the Provinces. The Beth Din is represented on the governing bodies of the main educational institutions of the Anglo-Jewish Community, such as Yeshivot, the Board of Jewish Religious Education, Jewish day schools, etc. In addition, they are often called upon by religious institutions here and abroad to help them in their financial difficulties by appealing to fellow-Jews for support.

From the brief picture given here of the functions of the Beth Din, one will readily realise under what exasperating conditions, caused by the war, the Dayanim and staff had to work in the previous building, and what a boon the new premises will be, making for the easier discharge of the court's heavy duties.

One final point should be mentioned here. As all sections of the Jewish Community (United Synagogue, Federation of Synagogues, Union of Orthodox Hebrew Congregations) seek the services of the Beth Din, it acts as a great unifying force within the community. During my recent visit to the United States, I often heard the remark that if American Jews envied British Jews one thing it was the centralising influence of the British Chief Rabbinate and the London Beth Din (Court of the Chief Rabbi).

similar effects of repentance upon the soul. The crumbs of bread are symbols of sin, which in Rabbinic theology is always described as "the yeast in the dough" because it causes man to be vain and puffed up with pride.

Much ingenuity has been used to try to present the custom as of pagan origin in order to throw ridicule upon it and banish it from general usage. It is true that in ancient days the superstition prevailed—but outside Judea—that diseases were expelled by placing puppets on boats and allowing them to drift seawards. It is also true that in Babylon, for instance, it was believed that a man's sins would be washed away if they were inscribed on tablets and then cast into the sea. But why connect these heathenish practices with a religion which from the very first inspired the heathen seer Balaam to exclaim: "Behold, there is no magic in Jacob and no divination whatsoever in Israel"? Philo and Josephus record that it was the custom for Jews in times of stress to pray near the water's edge—the purest place for such orisons. The ritual ablutions still undertaken by the pious before prayer may be a survival of the same ancient rite that gave birth to "Tashlich."

Atonement and Purity

In choosing the spot for the ceremony, care must be taken to select a stream where fish abound. For this predilection two reasons have been advanced. Kohelet (ix, 12) bemoans the fact that man is an easy prey to temptation, as are the fish caught in the net. The other reason sees a connection between the ceaseless vigil of God over our lives and the eye of the fish, believed to be always open. Admitting that both are fanciful suggestions, the moral they adorn is one that will be neglected to one's harm. Like the custom of "Kapparot" on the day before Yom Kippur, the "Tashlich" has been attacked on account of its alleged pagan associations and also on account of the possible danger that people might believe that they become thereby exempt from further repentance. Rid, however, of all such extraneous notions, a more picturesque and instructive symbol of atonement and purity would be hard to find.

"POPULATION OF BIRO-BIDJAN"

Excessive Figures

To the Editor of THE JEWISH CHRONICLE

From Mr. ISRAEL COHEN

SIR,—Your correspondent's reply to my letter, in which I asked him to state on what authority he estimated the population of Biro-Bidjan as "approaching the half-million mark," is anything but satisfactory. The reported tribute (in terms not quoted), that without the population of that territory it would have been impossible to supply the large Russian armies on the Far Eastern boundaries of the Soviet Union, affords no precise data on which an estimate can be based. The only figure that your correspondent gives of a recent addition to the population is of 200 families from Samarkand, a news item that he picked up on a Yiddish broadcast from Moscow. However interesting this may be, it is hardly likely to represent an addition of more than 1,000 persons.

Your correspondent states that his main sources of information are the Jewish Press and the radio of the Soviet Union. It is surprising that he does not state the name and date of the Jewish paper containing the latest figures upon which he bases himself. In an official publication of the American Biro-Bidjan Committee, published in New York in 1947, the total population of the territory was given as 175,000, of whom 115,000 were Jews. All Western students of Jewish life in the Soviet Union are agreed that those figures are excessive. Even if they were correct, it is inconceivable that in the course of 12 months there would have been such a tremendous increase as from 175,000 to "approaching the half-million mark." Besides, if your correspondent's estimate was even approximately correct, it would have been blazoned abroad by the American Biro-Bidjan Committee. One is, therefore, driven to the conclusion that his estimate, which he admits himself "may be exaggerated," is, indeed, a fantastic exaggeration.

In my previous letter, I asked your correspondent to state what proportion Jews formed of the total reputed population of Biro-Bidjan, as the unsuspecting reader might imagine that the total population or the great majority were Jews, whereas non-Soviet writers do not believe that they form more than 18 to 25 per cent. Your correspondent evades the question entirely, instead of being frank enough to state that he does not know.

ISRAEL COHEN.

Allocation to Mizrachi

To the Editor of THE JEWISH CHRONICLE

SIR,—In your issue of July 23 you publish a letter from Mr. B. Mindel, General Secretary of the Mizrachi Federation, to the effect that an allocation of £20,000 was made from the Israeli United Appeal (wrongly termed the "S.A. Jewish State Appeal").

I am directed to advise you that this statement is misleading and erroneous, and my national committee has issued the following statement to the local Press:

"Mizrachi Organisation and the Israeli United Appeal.

"There is no basis to the statement [Mr. Mindel's letter], which appeared in THE JEWISH CHRONICLE, London, of July 23, saying that out of the proceeds of the Israeli United Appeal, the Mizrachi Palestine Fund is receiving £20,000, states the Executive of the Israeli United Appeal.

"For many years past the S.A. Zionist Federation has made an allocation of £15,000 from the proceeds of the biennial Keren Hayesod Campaigns for Mizrachi institutions in Palestine. This allocation was made with the full approval of the Treasury of the Jewish Agency. There was no Keren Hayesod Campaign in 1948 because of the launching of the Israeli United Appeal, and it was deemed inadvisable for the Mizrachi organisation to have its own separate campaign. Owing to the precarious financial position of Mizrachi institutions in Palestine, the S.A. Zionist Federation made an allocation of £15,000 to them out of the balance on hand of the 1946 Keren Hayesod campaign. This also was done with the approval of the Treasury of the Jewish Agency."

"A DISSIDENT GROUP"

Defence Committee's Rejoinder

To the Editor of THE JEWISH CHRONICLE

From Mr. L. J. HYDLEMAN, J.P.

SIR,—The points in Mr. Bernerd's letter were dealt with in open debate by the Board on September 12. The 43 Group leaders were met by a sincere and ardent desire to reach agreement for unity; other members of the Defence Committee, including Professor S. Brodetsky, also tried to bring them to a sense of communal responsibility, equally without success. During the protracted and exhausting negotiations over the past two years, I resisted demands from my colleagues to denounce the 43 Group and to recognise the futility of further discussions with their leaders. When the Defence Committee arrived at its unanimous decision, I was, in fact, absent on holiday.

About a year ago, I had actually reached full agreement with Mr. Bernerd by which the entire 43 Group personnel would have come inside the official defence organisation; I was assured that every point had been settled satisfactorily, that Mr. Bernerd had been given full authority to conclude the arrangement, and that I could report its acceptance by the 43 Group executive to the Defence Committee. When the Defence Committee and the 43 Group executive met in a social atmosphere, the arrangement was mutually acknowledged until two of Mr. Bernerd's colleagues insisted on reopening discussion of nearly all the same points; even that stage was satisfactorily overcome, though it understandably strained the patience of some of my colleagues, until a condition was suggested which the Defence Committee felt bound to reject.

As the Defence Committee knows the position, the existence of the 43 Group as a separate body is proving an impediment to the work of defence and a disservice to the community. It is, therefore, bound to ask for the 43 Group's disbandment, but in doing so it is more than ready to utilise the services of every willing member in the most effective direction, and to co-opt, with equal status, men of their choice to the Defence Committee, and to each of its subsidiary committees.

My colleagues and I are convinced that it is only certain of the 43 Group's leaders who are the cause of the continuance of the situation; in spite of their oft-repeated declarations, they have not yet learnt to put the welfare of the community before their personal leanings. I believe that their members and other supporters would not allow the position to continue if they knew the facts, and if they sought the information for themselves about the extent, and value to the community, of the work of the official defence organisation and the contribution they can each make from within it.

LOUIS J. HYDLEMAN,
Chairman, Jewish Defence Committee,
Board of Deputies.

Points from Letters

HEBREW STUDENT'S COMPLAINT

A group of us intended to take the Hebrew School Certificate examination in March, so classes were set aside for us in the Willesden district. These classes were of a very high standard and our teachers were first-class. Not long ago we heard that these classes were to close down because of financial difficulties. Thus all we had learned was to be dropped and forgotten. Surely it cannot be financial difficulties when the cost would be to pay only two teachers. Surely our parents could get together and subscribe towards it. The money would be well spent, when the parents and teachers find they have the pleasure in knowing that their children know something and have passed an examination of a high standard.—JUDITH YUDKIN, 75, Chatsworth Road, N.W.2.

LACK OF PRACTICAL JUDAISM

I have, on several occasions, visited Jewish clubs, community centres, and restaurants up and down the country, and have been appalled at the lack of practical Judaism shown by members and others. One instance is the consumption of food and drink without the covering of heads, the washing of hands, or saying the Blessings. Kasher food is served and eaten, but the benefit derived therefrom is made void by the non-observance of Jewish dietary laws and can be compared to an am haaretz eating trefa wearing a yamelke.—ISAAC BERGMAN, 161, Pershore Road, Birmingham, 5.

ATTITUDE OF BRITISH PRESS

I have replied to the editorial of the DAILY EXPRESS which condemns the whole of the Jewish population in Palestine for the dastardly and fanatical murder of Count Bernadotte. Speaking from personal experience, the British Press have always been very reluctant to publish pro-Jewish articles, and, therefore, it really is not truly democratic. The editor of the DAILY EXPRESS seems to doubt whether the Israeli Government is even civilised. A census of Jewish contributions to all mankind, and especially to Great Britain, should give him the answer.—J. B. BUNT, "Holcombe," 4, Midvale Road, Paignton.

ROSH HASHANA SERMONS

I have observed for a number of years past that on Rosh Hashana the minister delivers his sermon after the blowing of the Shofar and before Musaf, and according to the Din it is not permissible to have a דרשה. Can anybody tell me if there is a היתר, or would one call a sermon not a דרשה?—A. H. STEINBERG, 28, Raymond Terrace, S.C. Rd., Dublin.

"EDMONTON CEMETERY"

On my visit to the Federation cemetery at Edmonton, I was very pleased to notice a great, all-round improvement, both in the care and the decorum at the cemetery. I have much pleasure in recording this improvement, and congratulate the authorities responsible.—I. LONDON, 12, Jubilee Mansions, E.1.

OLD "J.C.s" WANTED

The small Jewish population of this town used to receive Anglo-Jewish publications while there was a Jewish chaplain here. CLUB HELPERS WANTED

The Stamford Hill Junior Club for Boys urgently requires the voluntary services of one or two young men prepared to interest the youngsters after school hours in physical and recreational games or in art or hobbies. One evening a week, between the hours of 6.30 and 7.30 p.m., would meet the need. Offers should be sent to the Secretary of the club, 69, Stamford Hill, N.16.—DOUGLAS L. W. SCHOFIELD.

"ISRAELI SOLDIERS & SABBATH"

Mr. Jacob Sarna, in condemning the Jewish State for violating the Sabbath, has disregarded the cardinal principle of the "Ethics of the Fathers," which state: "Be slow in judgment and judge not thy neighbour until thou art come into his place." Not being fully acquainted with the details of this unfortunate incident, it is unjust to attack and brand the Jewish State with using Nazi tactics. When citing the Maccabean action in support of his argument, he misinterpreted them by omitting to mention their splendid example of religious tolerance in their struggle for national liberty. The Syrians and the Romans, being aware that the Jews were not allowed to violate and fight on a Sabbath, deliberately arranged to make their onslaughts on those particular days. The Maccabees, realising the great danger, courageously proclaimed a new edict, that during a war emergency it is permissible to violate the sanctity of Sabbath and fight for the defence of life and liberty. One of our Sages, Rabbi Jeremiah bar Abba, went even further than permitting Chillul Sabbath in time of war (see Chulin 17a).—JOSEPH PORTON, 41, Nunroyd Road, Leeds, 7.

Re-planning the Garden

THE coming weeks are the ideal time for re-planning your garden, and if you give some earnest thought to the matter now, you can be ready to go into action as soon as the last of the summer blooms have dropped, and you are ready to cut down and clear most of your flower beds. A garden is primarily a place in which time should be spent, either in satisfied contemplation of nature, or else in the sheer enjoyment of the beauty that surrounds you. Therefore, a major consideration in your plan must be that of labour-saving. If you have to be forever weeding and trimming your beds and walks, your garden may look lovely, but how much time will you have to admire it?

It is interesting, in this connection, to note a new trend in the arrangement and planning of some of the acknowledged show gardens, the influence of which may percolate even down to the most modest suburban plot.

Neglected Gardens

The war years, and those that have followed, have seen the inevitable neglect of many famous gardens, and it is not likely that labour will be available for many years to come, to produce and maintain the formal gardening of the past.

Carpet bedding, of which there were once many beautiful examples in old gardens annually thrown open to the public, has been replaced, in many cases during the past seasons, by more natural arrangements which are no less lovely. Of course, the natural advantages of surroundings, which include woodland and water, hillocks and deep valleys, are outside the scope of the gardener who owns and maintains just a small plot. Nevertheless, the example of the great gardens can teach the observant and enthusiastic small gardener many new ideas concerning the arrangement of his garden.

Once you get away from the idea of formal beds and lawns, and admit the beauty of natural settings, you will find that even your own small garden can be improved. For example, instead of planting a square or diamond-shaped bed of daffodils, try turfing over the bed and planting the bulbs in a corner that need not be mown until late in the spring. Daffodils, snowdrops, jonquils, or crocuses all lend themselves to this kind of natural growing.

To obtain the best results, take a handful of your bulbs and scatter them across the ground in which you intend to plant them. Let them lie on the grass, and then, with a sharp knife or pointed fork, make a hole underneath each as it lies, and bury the bulb.

CAREERS ADVICE

Fuel technology deals with the scientific treatment and utilisation of fuel for domestic and industrial use; it is closely linked with coal processing, gas manufacture, and petroleum technology. In the words of the first Lord Melchett, the Founder-President of the Institute of Fuel: "Fuel technology concerns every factory, and frequently every process in the factory." Lord Melchett presented the Institute with a sum of money for the award of an annual medal for an outstanding contribution in the scientific preparation or use of fuel.

Training for higher-grade appointments in fuel technology involves a degree course, or its equivalent in chemistry, engineering, or chemical engineering, followed by post-graduate training in the fuel departments of such institutions as the Manchester College of Technology, Leeds University, or the Imperial College of Technology, where training for a degree or diploma can be obtained. Courses in fuel technology for the lower grades are arranged at various Technical Colleges.

Full particulars about the many aspects of fuel technology can be obtained from the Institute of Fuel, 30, Bramham Gardens, London, S.W.5.

"FASHION BALL OF 1948"

Sufficient money to send one fully-equipped ambulance to Palestine, together with other medical equipment, was raised on Saturday evening at a "Fashion Ball of 1948," at the Dorchester Hotel, London, organised by the Jewish Aid to Charities Society. The cost of an ambulance is £1,250, and the money collected will be handed over to the Magen David Adom. About 550 people attended the ball.

A bank is the ideal place in which to plant daffodils, and these should be set in a grassy background as naturally as you can place them. Plan your lawn and grass verges with a view to easy mowing, and to this end avoid those small edges which must be kept cut with clippers.

Nothing looks more restful or decorative than a lawn which runs into a wilder patch in which first spring flowers and then rhododendrons and hydrangeas bloom. Peonies, too, will flame in such beds or patches in the early summer, and hollyhocks, daisies, autumn sunflowers, dahlias, gladioli, and chrysanthemums, with tall clumps of golden rod, will keep the flower section colourful while completely natural right up to the end of the autumn. And you will find that the maintenance and care of the natural garden is much simpler and less wearisome than the business of bedding out.

PUDDINGS AND SWEETS FOR YOM TOV

Crispy Tartlets

Corn flakes, 2½ oz.; rolled oats, 2 oz.; margarine, 2 oz.; golden syrup, 2 teaspoonfuls; apple purée or lemon curd.

CRUSH the corn flakes and mix with the rolled oats and sugar. Melt the margarine and syrup, pour on to the dry ingredients, and mix them together. Put about a dessertspoonful of the mixture into well-greased patty tins and press down firmly. Bake in a moderate oven —middle shelf—(400°, Regulo No. 5) for about 15 minutes. Remove from the oven, leave for a minute or two to set, then remove carefully from the tins and cool on a cake tray.

Fill with apple purée or lemon curd just before serving.

Apple Strudel

Flour, 8 oz.; dried egg, 1 level tablespoonful; currants or sultanas, 1 tablespoonful; dried breadcrumbs, 1 tablespoonful; apples, 1 lb.; margarine, 3 oz.; warm water, ¼ pt.; sugar; lemon substitute; pinch of salt.

SIEVE the flour, egg powder, and a pinch of salt into a mixing bowl. Melt the margarine, add two-thirds of it to the warm water, and pour on to the flour, then work and knead with the hands until the paste no longer sticks to the side of the bowl or hands. Put on a board, cover with a warm basin, and leave for half an hour.

Put the dough on a well-floured cloth, roll out and pull with the hands until it is so thin you can almost see through it. Peel the apples and cut them into small pieces, mix them with the dried fruit and crumbs, and add sugar to taste and a few drops lemon substitute, and, if liked, a little cinnamon. Spread this mixture on the pastry and roll up like a Swiss roll. Put on to a greased tin, forming it into a crescent shape, and brush over with the remaining margarine. Bake until crisp and nicely browned—about 40 minutes. Start baking in a hot oven—450°; Regulo No. 7—and, after 15 minutes, reduce the heat to moderate.

Note. Two tablespoonfuls of oil can be used to mix the dough instead of 2 oz. of margarine; or a mixture of cooking fat and margarine instead of all margarine.

Apple Meringue

Stewed apple, 1½ lb.; whites of 2 eggs; castor sugar, 2 oz.

PUT the apple in a shallow baking dish. Whisk the egg whites till stiff, heap up over the apple, dredge with the castor sugar, and bake in a moderate oven till the meringue is set and a light biscuit colour—20-30 minutes.

THE THREE CHOIRS FESTIVAL

To a Jewish visitor to the Three Choirs Festival at Worcester—and not to Jewish visitors alone—an outstanding feature has been the perfectly enchanting violin obligati of Mr. David Wise, the Leader of the London Philharmonic Orchestra, in Elgar's "The Kingdom," the lovely Hebrew melodies being played with exquisite feeling and entrancing effect.

When a Festival has been held annually for over 220 years, it is unsafe to be dogmatic without searching the records; but it is highly probable that this is the first time in the history of these Festivals (held successively in Worcester, Hereford, and Gloucester) that the orchestra engaged has had a Jewish leader, and certainly the first time that the Hebrew melodies, so reverently woven into the thematic texture by Elgar, including the better known Sefardi "Hamabdil," have been played in Worcester Cathedral by a Jewish musician.

Following a rendering of Dyson's "Nebuchadnezzar," a musical critic mentioned to the present writer, after an appreciative recognition of the merits of the work (one quite thrilling for Jewish ears), that he would like to hear a setting of such a text by Bloch, because of that composer's "background."

Translucent Cantabile

One thought immediately how Elgar would have delighted in hearing Mr. Wise's rendering of those themes which the composer introduced into his work with such extreme care for the susceptibilities of Jewry in relation to its liturgical music, a rendering by one who had that "background" to which the musical critic referred. The translucent cantabile of the violinist soared over the great spaces of the Cathedral and his consummate artistry will remain a treasured recollection.

"At the Beautiful Gate" (the Morn of Pentecost), "Mr. Solomon's Porch," and "The Sun Goeth Down," passages in "The Kingdom," all suffused with Hebrew melodies, represent some of the peak points of Elgar's last Oratorio.

Not more than a few hundred yards from the great Cathedral, the Worcester Hebrew Congregation has its miniature synagogue. A visit on the Friday evening at the close of the Festival, showed the Ner Tamid brightly burning, the faithful remnant of Jewry keeping aflame the light of the ancestral faith in the "Faithful City."

Worcester Cathedral holds the tomb of King John, who would hardly have credited that centuries ahead the successors of the victims of his intolerance would have been chanting themes such as inspired one of its greatest citizens to incorporate in his music. B.B.B.

HARROW'S NEW PREMISES

[By a JEWISH CHRONICLE Reporter]

The new home of the Harrow Young Judeans at 3, Vaughan Road, Harrow, was consecrated on Sunday. The service was conducted by Dayan H. M. Lazarus, who was assisted by the Rev. S. Rapoport and the Rev. H. Auerbach; and the premises were formally opened by Mr. Isaac Wolfson, who also read the Mincha service.

The premises were erected at a cost of about £1,250 by the Education Board of the Middlesex County Council. The cost of equipping them was met by Mr. Wolfson.

Following an address by Dayan Lazarus, good wishes to the Young Judeans were expressed by Mr. Wolfson, Alderman H. Hobsbaum, J.P., Mr. N. L. Mandelson, Mr. I. W. Goldberg (United Synagogue), Mr. L. Spanjer, and Miss Anderson, Harrow Youth Officer. The Club Chairman, Mr. P. Spanjer, and Messrs. S. Fisher and P. Zellin, who have been mainly responsible for the completion of the undertaking, also spoke. Mr. G. B. Lewis, Senior Warden of the Harrow and Kenton Synagogue, presided.

Mrs. Wolfson presented the N. L. Mandelson Cup to the Chairman of the Club, Mr. P. Spanjer, and another cup to Miss Doreen Fisher, Vice-Chairman and Treasurer.

CHIEF RABBI AT STEPNEY

[By a JEWISH CHRONICLE Reporter]

The years when he was one of the managers of the Stepney Jewish Lads' Club were recalled by the Chief Rabbi when, with Mrs. Brodie, he attended the club's annual prize-giving last week. Mr. John Sebag-Montefiore presided in the unavoidable absence of the President, Viscount Bearsted.

He had been actively associated with the club from 1921 to 1923, said Rabbi Brodie, and he had learned a great deal there. The club was pursuing fine ideals. The club motto was "The Club for All and All for the Club," and he wanted to extend it to "Judaism for All and All for Judaism." He reminded the boys that they were a remnant of the Jewish people and that on them depended the glory and faith of the Jewish people.

The prizes were presented by Mrs. Brodie, who, in turn, was presented with a badge by the Captain of the club, A. Perry, as a memento of her association with the club.

A.J.Y. CRICKET

In the Boys' Division of the A.J.Y. the Cricket Cup for the under-19s is being held jointly by the Harrow Young Judeans and the Cambridge and Bethnal Green teams (the final was left unfinished when darkness interfered with the match). North-West beat Stepney in the final of the under-16s.

THE BOOK OF LIFE

By "AUNTIE"

ON Rosh Hashana, our chief prayer is that we may be inscribed in the Book of Life. Each time during the Ten Days of Penitence that we recite the Amidah or Musaf, we add this supplication until the last prayer on Yom Kippur (Neilah), when we alter it to pray to God "to seal us in the Book of Life."

The Book of Life! God's own book in which he records the doings of His children. We imagine a picture of God sitting in His heavens with the book open before Him, and anxiously we think that our own name may not be inscribed. How can we be sure it will be? This is not difficult if we think of the way God would like us to live.

When Joshua took over the leadership from Moses, God came to him and said, "be strong and of a good courage, be not afraid, neither be thou dismayed, for the Lord thy God is with thee whithersoever thou goest." Joshua and the people of Israel were about to cross into a new country. We can be said to be doing the same. The New Year invites us. We do not know what we shall find.

There is a story told in the Talmud of a little boy who walked along the highroad carrying a jar that was carefully covered. An inquisitive man asked him what was in the pot. The boy answered: "If my father had wanted everyone to see, he would have left the vessel exposed."

Our road next year is also carefully covered by our heavenly Father. He does not want other people to know what is in store for us. It concerns us alone: each one of us is responsible for carefully carrying the vessel safely to its destination. Just as the boy did not linger on his way in idle gossip, so we must not desert the way of life by wrongdoing. The Shofar is a warning signal against the foes and temptations that lure us from the right path. It is a reminder to us to resolve to do better than we have done, so that we may be worthy of inscription in the Book of Life.

Achievements and Aims

And what about ourselves and our League? What have we done this year? Our outside responsibilities have been many; the special funds for our beloved Land of Israel has taken most of our energies and our cash. But many of you have nobly responded to my calls for help. We sent over £75 for Jewish Child's Day and £40 to the old folk in the Home for Aged Jews to buy sweets, fruit, and tobacco; and now you are collecting through the League to give entertainments and cheer to the blind.

But we must not sit and admire ourselves. The Shofar bids us go forward, and so I hope you will all continue to help me. I know you all agree that there can be no better means of using spare pocket-money than to help the blind to enjoy their life. Please remember them at this holy and solemn season.

My best wishes to you all.

ELLUL

The Shofar is sounded throughout Ellul after the morning services. Tradition says that Moses ascended Mount Sinai for the second time on Rosh Chodesh Ellul to receive the two tablets of stone. The Shofar was sounded to remind the people about their sin of the Golden Calf and the Shofar has been sounded throughout the generations to remind the people and bid them prepare for Rosh Hashana.

On the last Shabbat night before New Year, we begin to recite the Selichot, the special prayers of repentance. Some congregations actually start at midnight, but the more general custom is to start on the Sunday morning (this year on Ellul 22) a full week before the New Year.

Let us have faith that right makes might, and in that faith let us dare to do our duty as we understand it.—Lincoln.

ISAIAH

Though little can be told concerning the incidents of Isaiah's life, his personality and character stand before us in his writings with all the certainty and clearness that could be desired . . . We can watch him, and, as it were, walk by his side, through all the varied and eventful phases of his forty years' ministry. We can observe him as a reformer, denouncing social abuses, sparing neither high nor low in his fearless and incisive censure. We can follow him as a statesman, devoted patriotically to his country's interests, and advising her political leaders in times of difficulty and danger. We can see him as a theologian, emphasising old truths, developing new ones, bringing fresh ideas to light which were destined to exercise an important influence in the generations which followed. Throughout the reigns of Ahaz and Hezekiah he is the central figure in Jerusalem, and the position which he there took—his motives, principles, policy, the character of his teaching, the nature and extent of his influence—are all reflected in the collection of his prophecies which we possess.—Driver.

NEW YEAR MESSAGES—5709

From
Rabbi Dr. SOLOMON SCHONFELD
(Presiding Rabbi, Union of Orthodox Hebrew Congregations, London)

THE past year has seen great progress in our own worldly sphere—Jews have acquired a State. This very relationship itself is a reminder that Jewry and Judaism have been and always will be beyond all that this earth can offer. Israel, the people of the Book, is, like a soul, immortal. When it has a body, a country, it is active in the corporeal world; but its essence is the eternal spirit, the concept עמך ישראל Thy People Israel.

It is right that the natural sciences should concentrate upon the body, and that statesmen and builders should devote themselves to the soil, to organisation, and security. But let them not attempt to deny their comparatively minor role in the long chain of events and developments. We are but tools in a process that is concerned with vast masses throughout thousands of years and countless generations.

So we find that all our recent achievements are thrown all too soon into the melting-pot of international developments, depending upon peace or war. And our New Year prayers that all mankind become united in the service of the Almighty assume a practical meaning and a forceful imperative. The greatest in our midst are but useful instruments in the hands of the Architect of Destiny. Should we ever forget or deny this, we tend to grow arrogant in our ungodly conceit, we become over-aggressive in our self-assurance, we overstep the limit of what is right, proper, and safe, causing our own downfall.

Jews of all kinds and in all climes have always formed a grand partnership. It may well be our special department to concentrate on cultivating the spirit of Godliness in Israel. And none shall say that we have not contributed an essential service to our people and through them to mankind. For, by our living Torah lives, by our acting religiously, and by our adherence to Orthodoxy, shall we be both fulfilling an immediate requirement and contributing largely towards the realisation of an ultimate goal, when God's universal rule will be established on Mount Zion.

Let us approach this Rosh Hashana with profound gratitude for the miracles of the past, and with resolution to perform our part in the shaping of a lofty future.

From the Rev. Dr. A. COHEN
(Minister of the Birmingham Congregation)

THE most significant prayer in the ritual of the Jewish New Year is that all God's creatures form themselves into a single band to do His will with a perfect heart. Rarely in the past can that aspiration have been invested with the urgency which attaches to it now.

In the annals of the Jewish people the year 5708 will be distinguished as annus mirabilis, when the dream of the ages became a reality. We who are privileged to witness the rebirth of the Jewish State have cause for rejoicing, but also for anxiety. We cannot be insensible to the many and grave problems lying ahead which must be solved before Israel rests upon secure foundations and becomes the home of those of our brethren whose eyes are turned longingly towards it. For the overcoming of those problems unity within the Jewish ranks is essential, but that unity is conspicuously lacking. Instead of presenting a united front, Jewry is split into fragmentary groups which will not sink differences to achieve a common aim. To us Jews, in the first instance, the Rosh Hashana prayer for a united band should strike home and create a change of heart.

But, humanly speaking, the destiny of the Jewish people, both in Israel and the Diaspora, is linked with world events. How tragic it is to look on at the nations drifting into two hostile camps so soon after the end of a disastrous global war, thereby threatening the possibility of another! All right-thinking men and women must be oppressed with the darkest forebodings when they read current news. They may not be statesmen or politicians, but their common sense makes them see all too plainly the abyss towards which they are being carried. Cannot national leaders also see it? And cannot they see what is essential to avert the catastrophe? In our contracted world, made so much smaller by scientific inventions, one fate involves all peoples. They must rise or fall together. So for them, too, the overriding need is for unity and co-operation in the common task of reconstruction.

May, then, the New Year bring a universal response to the prayer which we offer.

From Rabbi HAROLD REINHART
(Senior Minister of the West London Synagogue)

ALL creation, say the Rabbis, exists for atonement. Never was there a word spoken more true or more pertinent. Our fundamental need always, but especially to-day, is to return. To return means not merely, in a negative sense, to repent of our sins, our transgressions, and our failings; it means, in a positive sense, to renew our obligations to the heavenly commandments, and to exult in the privilege and the glory of God's support and approval. It means not merely to forsake a world of poor and false values, but to find a world of everlasting, all-powerful, and redeeming truth and love. To be a Jew means to live in such a world and to exult in such a privilege. The Jewish attitude is faith in a spiritual universe, of which every man is a creature, and in which every man has a share. The Jewish life consists in the pursuit of such employments, such efforts, and such applications as will conduce to spiritual fruits. It is no accident that the high holy days are the high holy days. Repentance, charity, and prayer are not merely the exercises most appropriate for these days; they are the most urgent, most significant, most manly of all human activities. To reassert our place in the forefront of the fighters for God's kingdom—this is our Jewish task. There is no substitute for this purpose; and there is no possibility of attaining it through any outward means. The individual Jew's broken spirit, yearning heart, and earnest will—these alone can avail. May God help us in this stern hour, and in this challenging task!

From the Rev. LESLIE I. EDGAR
(Senior Minister, Liberal Jewish Synagogue)

THE momentous times in which we live give exceptional importance to the message of the Holy-days. We have come to a point in history when the power in human hands, immeasurably greater than ever before, has far outstripped man's sense of moral obligation. Wherever we look, the problem is the same—the disastrous lack of balance between the magnitude of man's power and the minuteness of his sense of responsibility.

The whole outlook for mankind would be transformed if only men would ask themselves the supreme question: "What does the Lord our God require of us?" Reverence for God would ensure a high sense of responsibility in the exercise of the tremendous power which men now possess. Even allowing for innumerable, inevitable mistakes, we could yet look to the future with boundless hope.

Unhappily, reverence for God—and with it, a desire to know and to conform to His requirements—is almost completely lacking in the modern world. That is why men have—and not unnaturally—little trust that the mighty power now in human hands will be used responsibly and well. Instead of universal hope, there is universal anxiety. Instead of widespread confidence, there is extensive fear.

It is a sad fact that, just when it is most urgently needed, a sense of religious dedication among Jews is at its weakest. There is grievous danger that a purely political conception of the Jewish future may replace our ancient conviction of religious destiny. This is partly because some Jews also have been infected with the secularism of the time; partly a reaction to the world's cynicism in the face of Jewish suffering. Profoundly though Jews differ in their attitude to a State of Israel, there ought to be unanimous conviction that a worth-while and great future for the Jew demands that Judaism remain paramount in Jewish life; that the world-wide community of Israel, integrated into many nations, has to accomplish a religious destiny and, despite the world's ingratitude and cruelty, has to fulfil a religious service to mankind. We have to ensure that the ideals of the Hebrew prophets are not

JERUSALEM ELECTRIC DIVIDEND DEFERRED

Following the passing of an ordinary dividend by Palestine Electric comes news that payment of the six months dividend due on the £P225,000 of 7 per cent Cumulative Preference capital of the Jerusalem Electric and Public Service Corporation is to be deferred.

The Directors state that during the past six months there has been a falling off in the Corporation's income owing to the disturbed position in Jerusalem. Furthermore, heavy capital commitments have been entered into for plant extensions.

Since the beginning of April no detailed monthly reports have been received although the power station continues to generate on a reduced scale. Despite big increases in wages and fuel charges, the directors are satisfied that profits in 1948 should not be less than those for 1947. It is obvious, however, that until more detailed information is available from Jerusalem the directors' only sound course is to conserve resources.

Interesting Reports

Among the many interesting reports recently received, the accounts of Johannesburg Consolidated Investment Company have created some discussion. Owing to the adoption of the basis of valuing investments as laid down in the 1948 Companies Act, amounts aggregating £1,867,400 were added to investments at June 30. That amount has been transferred to an investment reserve.

The book value of investments has risen from £7,523,052 to £10,341,310. The Board of Trade have exempted the company from showing an aggregate market value of its investments. The directors consider that Stock Exchange quotations do not give a reliable measure of the value of investments held, especially as it is difficult to give an accurate market valuation of investments in mining companies which have not reached the production stage.

Interest was also taken in the announcement of considerably higher profits by J. Gliksten & Son Ltd., the timber and building material distributors. Net profits for the year to June 30 last rose from £236,167 to £320,677. Taxation, however, takes £203,168 from these profits. Ordinary dividend is maintained at 25 per cent.

A sum of £40,000 is placed to General Reserve against £10,000 previously, and £10,000 goes to Dividend Equalisation Reserve. During the year the company undoubtedly felt the benefit of the "import participations in merchanting enterprises" to which the Chairman referred a year ago.

Art Notes

PICASSO, 1945-1947

Fifty-five lithographs made by Picasso between 1945 and 1947 are to be seen at No. 4, St. James's Square, under the auspices of The Arts Council. They epitomise neatly the dozen or so trends of artistic expression that this prolific master has pursued during his life; it is significant to note, in this regard, the glance back to Cubism, evident in the compositions of owls, which are among the most moving of all the works shown. A few of the superb animal drawings, studies of pigeons and rams' heads from the recent Buffon will possibly give pause to those persons of little perception who seem to take pride in reviling this, one of the greatest living artists of all.

"The Centauress," a bacchanalian subject, must be reckoned one of the masterpieces of the lithographer's art. With the exception of two or three of the works, the lithographs are expressed entirely in graded tones from white to black, and yet the beholder is conscious on entering the gallery of an impression of vivacious colour; there are no dead patches, no "wastelands" in these works—the precisely balanced tone values do not allow of any. All is vitality and light. As soon as Picasso has expressed his idea, he has the native wit to refrain from further embellishment or comment. This discipline accounts largely for the yawning chasm that divides him from his moronic imitators.

Pablo Picasso has imbibed freely, and he still does, from streams of culture, the sources of which are to be found in widely differing periods and distantly divided lands. Three variations on a theme of Lucas Cranach (Bathseba and David) provide some of the most felicitous examples in the show of this profitable practice. The exhibition is not all on the same level, there are indeed a few quite slight items such as the line drawing of a bull, but even these have a certain decorative quality. A.K.S.

overwhelmed by nationalist ambitions. The Jewish name must not be shamed by acts of murder and deeds which violate the most elementary moral standards.

The only sane appeal—as it is the only right appeal—both to the House of Israel and to mankind, at this decisive epoch in human history, is the ancient appeal of the Hebrew prophets. It is the appeal which rings through the solemn period of repentance, prayer, and meditation with which we Jews begin a New Year. "Seek ye the Lord . . . then ye shall go out with joy and be led forth with peace." "Seek ye Me . . . and ye shall live."

IN our report of the C.B.F. Conference, in last week's issue, Mr. A. Segal's name was erroneously spelt Siegel; and in the previous week's report of the Board of Deputies his constituency was reported as Dollis Hill and Gladstone Park instead of Hampstead.

Company Meetings

WATNEY COMBE REID & CO.

THE PRICE OF BEER

The ordinary general meeting of Watney Combe Reid & Co., Limited, was held on September 24 in London, Major A. C. Bonsor (Chairman) presiding.

The following are extracts from the Chairman's circulated statement and speech:

June 30, 1948, marked the completion of 50 years of trading by the company under its present name. The amalgamation in 1898 brought together and perpetuated in name three kindred firms. Watneys first became associated with the Stag Brewery in 1837, although there had been a brewery there long prior to 1700. Combe & Co. Ltd., and Reid's Brewery Co.—formed in the late 1700s—were successors of pre-existing breweries.

During the year under review, the Chancellor of the Exchequer introduced two Budgets, each of which resulted in an increase of 1d. a pint in the price of beers of average gravity, and of 2d. a pint in the better-class beers. The price of beer such as is allowed to be brewed to-day is too high, and must lead to a serious reduction in sales, of which there are already distinct signs.

It has always been our aim to provide facilities for catering where it is practicable, and, despite difficulties, food is obtainable in 94 per cent of the company's houses, of which 40 per cent serve main meals totalling over 141,000 a week, in addition to an incalculable number of less substantial meals served at bars and snack counters. There still seems to be an impression in the minds of several responsible people that the interests of brewers lie solely in the sale of beer, wines, and spirits. We have a much higher conception than that of our duty to the public.

Having regard to the requirements of the future and the ever-rising cost of building work, further appropriations are required, and the transfer of £250,000 from this year's profits to the properties and plant contingencies reserve is recommended. Any appropriations we can make to-day have to be made out of profits which are taxed at twice the pre-war rate. The cost of building to-day is just over twice the pre-war cost. As a result a new building to-day requires the appropriation of over three times as much profit before taxation as a comparable building required pre-war.

The following sub-division of each £1 received by the company may be of interest: Beer duty and taxation 11s. 8.4d.; materials, 3s. 6.2d.; working expenses, 3s. 9.5d.; salaries, wages, and pensions, 3s. 7.3d.; Preference and Ordinary dividend, 3d.; Deferred Ordinary dividend 8.8d.; reserve 4.8d.

The report was adopted.

THE ANGLO-PALESTINE BANK, LTD.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that an Interim Dividend of 3% free of Income Tax for the year ending December 31, 1948, has been declared payable on October 21, 1948, to holders of Ordinary and "A" Ordinary Shares of the Company.

The Warrants for the Dividend on the "A" Ordinary Shares will be dispatched to Shareholders on October 20, 1948, and payment of the Dividend on the Ordinary Shares will be made at the Registered Offices of the Company to registered holders on presentation of Coupon No. 36 together with the relative Share Certificate and to holders of Bearer Warrants on presentation of Coupon No. 36 detached from the relative Share Warrants to Bearer. Coupons must be deposited three clear days for examination, together with any declarations which may be required in accordance with the Exchange Control Act, 1947.

The Transfer Books of both classes of the above-mentioned Shares will be closed from October 15 to October 20, 1948, both days inclusive, for the preparation of Dividend Warrants.

By reason of Double Taxation Relief, the net United Kingdom rate of Tax payable by the Company is 4/6d. (provisional) in the £. Under Section 52 of the Finance (No. 2) Act, 1945, the gross amount, which is the equivalent of this Dividend for Income Tax purposes, is ascertained by reference to the full standard rate of Income Tax of 9/- in the £, but the rate at which any relief or repayment due may be allowed to a Shareholder is limited to the net United Kingdom rate.

WILLSONS (LONDON AND PROVINCES)

RESERVE POSITION STRENGTHENED

The 16th annual general meeting of Willsons (London and Provinces), Ltd., was held on September 22 in London.

Colonel the Rt. Hon. Lord Barnby, C.M.G., C.B.E., M.V.O. (the Chairman), presided, and in the course of his speech said:

Since our last meeting the termination of the company's accounting period has been changed from January 31 to March 31 to coincide with the fiscal year. Thus the accounts before you cover a period of 14 months.

REDUCTION IN PROFIT MARGIN

Apart from these variations the turnover and profits for the 14 months under review have exceeded the expectations of your directors in spite of the temporary reduction of profit margins for part of the period which resulted in a diminution of gross profit of nearly £10,000, which has been partly counteracted by the inclusion in the 14 months' account of part of a third rationing period. As an indication of the value which has been given to our customers, the gross profit margin on our sales for the 14 months shows a decrease of 2½ per cent in comparison with the previous year.

I need not remind you of the difficulties we suffered at the commencement of the period under review. We had to contend first with the fuel crisis and appalling weather conditions; then with scarcity of supplies of materials arising out of these circumstances, and simultaneous steadily rising expenses.

TRADING RESULTS

The accounts for the fourteen months ended March 31, 1948, show that the profits amounted to £105,479, compared with £118,316 for the twelve months ended January 31, 1947. In addition to this, profits arising from the disposal of capital assets totalling £28,234, has been credited to reserves.

Your directors recommend that a final dividend of 20 per cent, less tax, be paid on Ordinary shares making a total of 30 per cent for the 14 months (which is approximately the same rate as the 25 per cent paid for the previous 12 months).

RESERVES

The capital reserves now amount to £192,547 and the revenue reserves are £100,963, so that the total reserves are £293,510 compared with a total in the previous balance-sheet of £173,749. This total of the reserves of £293,510 is in excess of the issued capital which amounts to £261,387.

No allocation has been made to the stock equalisation reserve. In the previous accounts it was a new item, but as it was found that the depreciation of stock, as otherwise provided, was believed to be adequate, the amount standing to the reserve was transferred to that provided for future taxation.

The liquid position at March 31 last stands at £280,534 and is an improvement of £86,645 over that shown at January 31, 1947.

The fixtures and fittings of about 100 branches, our warehouse, and head offices are shown in the accounts at £21,102 which is only a small percentage of the estimated cost of replacement to-day.

DIVIDEND POLICY

Your directors have maintained approximately the same rate of dividend as last year. In normal external circumstances an appreciable increase would have been recommended, but the Board has respected the request for voluntary sacrifice made by the agreement between the Federation of British Industries and the Chancellor of the Exchequer. Such increase could have been justified on the grounds of exceptional circumstances which the company could have claimed as applicable to it (for during the year we replaced four of our branches which had been destroyed by enemy action in Belfast, Bristol, Plymouth, and Swansea), but it was felt that in the present circumstances no advantage should be taken of this position.

THE WAY EACH POUND IS SPENT

How small a sum remained to the shareholders as reward for their provision of the capital utilised in developing the business! By way of illustration, from the accounts before you a breakdown of every 20s. of receipts is as follows:

	s.	d.
Cost of garments	15	1¼
Wages, salaries, etc.	2	9
Rents, rates, repairs, and other expenses and reserves, less receipts	1	3¼
Income Tax and profits tax		6¼
Dividends		2¼
Remaining in the business		1

Additional branches are being added throughout the United Kingdom without haste as opportunity offers.

ENCOURAGING PROSPECTS

Your directors face the future with every confidence. The volume of trade for the first half of the current year is most encouraging. The reopened and new branches, the better selection of merchandise, and exceptional values have all contributed to the excellent results.

Our success is in no small measure due to the efforts of your founder and managing director, Mr. Maurice Mauray, in building up the fine organisation to meet and to encourage consumer demand in the shops selected by him and to the work of your merchandise director, Mr. Horace J. Cohen, and the team of buyers.

NEW HEADQUARTERS

When we last met we had not then obtained possession of our present headquarters building, to which I am now pleased to welcome you. The centralisation of our organisation since March last has increased efficiency and reduced expenses. These advantages will be, we believe, progressive. The larger portion of the company's premises are for a few years to be occupied by a Government department, but when that reverts to the company you will have a building capable of extensive development, subject to the necessary capital expenditure in modernising the front and interior.

It is my pleasure and duty on your directors' behalf to thank all suppliers of materials, also those working for us in making them up, also the manufacturers of garments, all of whom have contributed to the gratifying results of the period under review. We appreciate their wholehearted co-operation and look forward to even closer collaboration in the future to our mutual benefit. It is also my pleasure to thank your managing director and the administrative officers, the buyers and members of the staff at head office and in the branches for the excellent team spirit which has produced the results now presented. These are abundant evidence of what individual thought and combined effort can achieve when there exists such spirit as that which pervades our organisation.

The report and accounts were unanimously adopted, and the final dividend of 20 per cent, making a total distribution of 30 per cent. for the year, was approved.

A LA CARTE

"A La Carte," at the Savoy Theatre, is fully justified of its title. Its general atmosphere is one of artistry and wit. Hermione Baddeley and Henry Kendall, in one brilliantly comic role after another, sustain the fun from beginning to end. Burlesque and satire set the prevailing mood, and many aspects of the contemporary scene provide themes for mirth. The theatre, ballet, cinema, radio, and the oddities of social and political life in present-day Britain, bring grist to the mill—and the topicality is at times almost startling. Not is a subdued note of nostalgic sentiment lacking from this feast of fun. H.H.

Music

COSI FAN TUTTE

If "Cosi Fan Tutte" has suffered from comparative neglect, it must have been for lack of Clive Carey to produce it. It was chosen to open the new Sadlers Wells season, and struck the same note of light-hearted, artificial yet delicious foolery that was characteristic of its performances last season. The new Ferrando, Gerald Davies, did not rise quite to the opportunity given him in the aria towards the end of the first act. The new Despina, too, Patricia Hughes, though spritely and artful enough, did not make sufficient of the wit in her actual lines. But Owen Brannigan as Don Alfonso, and Marion Lowe and Anna Pollak as the two lovesick yet fickle maidens, are, I think, even better than before. Marion Lowe, in particular, achieving tremendous effect in her mock-tragic opportunities. But it is the production, which never broadens into farce, yet never succumbs to the danger of exaggerated stylisation, that swings the comedy along, aided magnificently by James Robertson and the orchestra. FILMS OF THE WEEK

Esther Waters (Gaumont, Haymarket, and Marble Arch Pavilion) is a lavish version of George Moore's work. The vicissitudes and tribulations of a betrayed servant-girl, which are brought about by the misdeeds of her lover (a groom, who ultimately becomes a leading London bookmaker), are dealt with in a vacillating and evasive manner. Despite untiring efforts on the part of Kathleen Ryan and Dirke Bogarde, as the ill-matched couple, this is a thoroughly novelettish piece of screencraft. There are, however, some splended Derby Day scenes in that carefree Victorian era, in which this not unattractive film is set.

HENDON EX-SERVICEMEN

Anti-Defamation and Cultural Activities

[By a JEWISH CHRONICLE Reporter]

Increased membership, a full cultural programme, and a considerable contribution to the anti-defamation activities were the main items in the report of the past year's work presented by Major Montague Walters, the chairman, at the annual meeting of the Hendon and Golders Green Branch of the Association of Jewish Ex-Service Men and Women, held on Monday at the Hendon Synagogue.

They had nearly 350 active members, but there was still considerable room for improvement, Major Walters said. They had three sub-committees; one for anti-defamation, under the chairmanship of Mr. Goodrich; one for recruiting and publicity, under the chairmanship of Mr. B. Winkler; and a sports and social committee, under the chairmanship of Major H. Seigal. A discussion group to train speakers had not proved successful.

In appreciation of the facilities granted by the Hendon Synagogue, the branch had presented a number of Singer's Prayer Books to the synagogue. On November 13 (Armistice Saturday), the service at the synagogue would be given over to the ex-Servicemen and there was to be a special prayer of commemoration.

Major Denfield presented the accounts, which showed a surplus. Donations to charities were £156.

The Rev. L. Hardman, President of the branch, referred to the cultural activities, and suggested that a greater knowledge of Israel was necessary. He would like to see more inter-functions with non-Jewish bodies. He suggested a short evening service or, better still, the full evening service interspersed with English translations after each meeting. He appealed for help for a library in the synagogue.

The following were elected: Major Montague Walters, Chairman; Major H. Seigal, Vice-Chairman; Major Denfield, Treasurer; Messrs. B. Winkler, M. Goodrich, J. Pearl, N. Bloom, S. Bluestone, W. Lawson, D. Silverman, and Miss Ruth Citroen, Committee.

Noose (Warner Theatre, Leicester Square) is an adaptation of the stage play about gangsterism in Soho. There is the conventional treatment and the usual three parties: the villain and his chief henchman (Joseph Calleia and Nigel Patrick), the interfering Press lady and gentleman (Carole Landis and Derek Farr), and the vigilant policemen (Stanley Holloway and Robert Adair). I dislike the glorification of violence on the screen, even though justice eventually triumphs. In this case, however, the unsavoury plot has all the marks of authenticity, as is evidenced by a recent and amazingly similar occurrence in London.

The Winslow Boy (Plaza, Piccadilly Circus) is based on an actual famous case in which the parents of a young naval cadet, wrongly accused of theft, sued the Admiralty in order to vindicate the boy's character. The film is superbly done, with brilliant performances by Robert Donat, as counsel for the boy; Sir Cedric Hardwicke, as the father; Margaret Leightman; Kathleen Harrison; and Neil North, as the boy.

The Weaker Sex (Odeon, Marble Arch) is a well-contrived version of the stage play, "No Medals," by Esther McCracken, in which the difficulties of an average middle-class family during the war and after are treated with conviction and not a little humour. Ursula Jeans is really fine as the central figure, and she is ably supported by Cecil Parker, Joan Hopkins, and Derek Bond.

D. W. Griffiths's silent film, The Birth of a Nation is revived at the Everyman, Hampstead. F.H.S.

JEWISH BIBLIOGRAPHER IN ENGLAND

[By a JEWISH CHRONICLE Reporter]

Dr. Joseph Prijs, who is in charge of the Hebrew section of the Library of the University of Basle, and is an authority on Hebrew manuscripts, is in England on behalf of his library for the purpose of compiling a bibliography of the Hebrew books printed in Basle since about 1500. Among Dr. Prijs's duties is the responsibility for the cataloguing of Hebrew manuscripts of which there are approximately 400, and of printed Hebrew books, which number some thousands in the whole of Switzerland.

Dr. Prijs, who has been working at the Bodleian, Oxford, and at the British Museum, told me that many of the early Hebrew books printed in Basle can only be found at those two places.

Among the books and manuscripts unearthed by Dr. Prijs are many that were written by well-known Christian Hebraists of the 16th and 17th century, notably by Sebastian Munster and Johann Buxtorf. So far as Jewish works are concerned, the most important were those of the Talmud printed in 1579-1580. Also of interest are the Jewish-German books that were printed in Basle, and of which only one copy is in existence.

Dr. Prijs used to be a Lecturer at Munich University in the department of Jewish Studies which, he said, had been endowed by the late Mr. James Loeb. He is responsible for the genealogy of the late Sir O. E. d'Avigdor Goldsmid, which he prepared at Sir Osmond's request.

MONTY HARRIS, 23, of Lakenheath Road, Southgate, Middlesex, and Nathan Raymond Burns, 23, of Ferndale Road, Tottenham, N., who appeared on remand at the Guildhall, London, on Thursday of last week charged with being concerned together in the unlawful possession of explosives, were committed for trial at the Old Bailey. They pleaded not guilty and reserved their defence. Bail was refused.—(P.A.)

Obituary

Mr. ASHER BEILIN (Tel-Aviv), 67, was well known as a Hebrew and Yiddish playwright. He acted as Secretary, for a time, to Sholem Aleichem. He worked as a journalist in Poland and the United States before settling in Palestine. While in America he was, for a short period, editor of the JEWISH MORNING JOURNAL.

Mr. SAMUEL GORDON (Hull), 77, was, for many years, President and Treasurer of the Lower Union Street Beth Hamedresh and former Chairman of the Hebrew Communal School. In recent years, he was an active member of the Council of the Western Synagogue and of the Chevra Kadisha.

Mr. ITZHAK LUFTBAN (Tel-Aviv) 99, was co-founder of the Histadrut and editor of the Mapai weekly HAPOEL HATZAIR.

Miss STELLA PLOSKIN (Birmingham), 22, was actively associated with many communal youth organisations. "She will be particularly remembered," writes Mr. B. J. Goldstein, "for her work as Hon. Secretary to the production committees of the recent communal revues, 'Kommunal Kapers' and 'Second Helping.' Wherever Birmingham Jewish youth gather, she will be sadly missed."

THE LATE SIR CHARLES WRENCH

In a tribute to Sir Charles Wrench, President of the London Federation of Boys' Clubs, who died last week at the age of 73, Mr. Lionel Warson writes:- "Nearly every Jewish Boys' Club in London is affiliated to the Federation, and Sir Charles was always pleased to welcome members of Jewish clubs in the dramatic and other competitions. I found him very encouraging and helpful during the first two years of the Hackney Jewish Boys' Club. He attended the consecration in February, 1940."

RECENT WILLS

The former Governor-General of Australia, SIR ISAAC ISAACS, who died in February, left estate in Victoria sworn at £A.5,380 gross. Sir Isaac bequeathed many of his papers and insignia to the Commonwealth National Museum "in memory of the first Australian-born Governor-General and as a perpetual reminder of the right of Australians to aspire to the highest positions in the gift of their native land."

TRAVEL NOTES

By "GREEN FLAG"

A correspondent who recently returned from a tour of Tunisia, sends me a friendly warning, which I gladly pass on. Addresses given in certain Jewish handbooks, he writes, are not always reliable. For instance, one place listed in a booklet issued by a London Jewish organisation turned out to be a back room—with far from a pleasant odour at that—in a cosmopolitan port.

As for the so-called Jewish restaurants in Tunis, Sfax, and Homt Souk, half of them are hidden away in the native quarters, and the food and service are of the poorest. Care should also be exercised on the Isle of Djerba, and at Sousse, where one in seven of the population is a Jew. My correspondent advises every Jewish visitor to Tunis to call first at the offices of the Syndicat D'Initiative, 1, Avenue Carthage, where visitors will be directed to a suitable Kasher restaurant.

Answers to Correspondents

M. Goodwin (Loughton): Write to the Hebrew Immigrant Aid Society, 425, Lafayette Street, New York, for details of the facilities offered to prospective settlers.

Hermann Goldberger (N.W.5): There are kasher kitchens and synagogues in both the Queen Mary and the Queen Elizabeth, but the kashrut is not supervised by any religious authority.

"Chalutz" (Bow Road, E.): It would appear that you have Yahrzeit while you will be waiting for the ship at Marseilles. Kaddish can be said at the Marseilles Synagogue, 117, Rue Breteuil.

MISSING RELATIVES

Inquiries have been received by THE JEWISH CHRONICLE with regard to the following Missing Relatives, etc.

Mrs. Chaja Goldberg (née Topol), 55, aunt, of Lomza, daughter of Lejzer Hersz and Sura, is sought by Ala Pukier, Klodzko, daughter of Israel and Pesa.

Hyman Cohen, nephew, born in England, son of Rabbi Abraham Cohen and Milly, of Warsaw, is sought by Charles Proffman, New York.

Mrs. Hinda Szurik (née Krawiec), 70, aunt, of Siemiatycze, daughter of Moshe and Sura, and family, are sought by Kalman Krawiec, Lodz.

Ida Silverman, about 35, born in London and employed by his brother, Morris, in the Lambeth Furnishing Company, is sought by Misu Bernstein, Rumania.

Berl Kornbeuser is sought by Schia Feller and Pesie Stengel.

Lion and Yechezkiel Kossoy, of Homel, Russia, who came to London in 1905, great-uncles, about 60 to 70, are sought by Edward Kossoy, son of Yaakow, in Tel-Aviv.

Rachel and Cippa (C[illegible]a) Krasnowa, of Balta, who came from Odessa to London in 1924 and were last heard of by inquirer's parents in 1940, are sought by Eli.

Information with regard to the above will be gladly received at the offices of THE JEWISH CHRONICLE, Newspaper House, 20 High Street, High Wycombe, Bucks, and duly transmitted to the proper quarters.

Theatre

A LA CARTE

"A La Carte," at the Savoy Theatre, is fully justified of its title. Its general atmosphere is one of artistry and wit. Hermione Baddeley and Henry Kendall, in one brilliantly comic role after another, sustain the fun from beginning to end. Burlesque and satire set the prevailing mood, and many aspects of the contemporary scene provide themes for mirth. The theatre, ballet, cinema, radio, and the oddities of social and political life in present-day Britain, bring grist to the mill—and the topicality is at times almost startling. Nor is a subdued note of nostalgic sentiment lacking from this feast of fun. H.H.

Music

COSI FAN TUTTE

If "Cosi Fan Tutte" has suffered from comparative neglect, it must have been for lack of Clive Carey to produce it. It was chosen to open the new Sadlers Wells season, and struck the same note of light-hearted, artificial yet delicious foolery that was characteristic of its performances last season. The new Ferrando, Gerald Davies, did not rise quite to the opportunity given him in the aria towards the end of the first act. The new Despina, too, Patricia Hughes, though spritely and artful enough, did not make sufficient of the wit in her actual lines. But Owen Brannigan as Don Alfonso, and Marion Lowe and Anna Pollak as the two lovesick yet fickle maidens, are, I think, even better than before. Marion Lowe, in particular, achieving tremendous effect in her mock-tragic opportunities. But it is the production, which never broadens into farce, yet never succumbs to the danger of exaggerated stylisation, that swings the comedy along, aided magnificently by James Robertson and the orchestra. FILMS OF THE WEEK

Esther Waters (Gaumont, Haymarket, and Marble Arch Pavilion) is a lavish version of George Moore's work. The vicissitudes and tribulations of a betrayed servant-girl, which are brought about by the misdeeds of her lover (a groom, who ultimately becomes a leading London bookmaker), are dealt with in a vacillating and evasive manner. Despite untiring efforts on the part of Kathleen Ryan and Dirke Bogarde, as the ill-matched couple, this is a thoroughly novelettish piece of screencraft. There are, however, some splended Derby Day scenes in that carefree Victorian era, in which this not unattractive film is set.

Noose (Warner Theatre, Leicester Square) is an adaptation of the stage play about gangsterism in Soho. There is the conventional treatment and the usual three parties: the villain and his chief henchman (Joseph Calleia and Nigel Patrick), the interfering Press lady and gentleman (Carole Landis and Derek Farr), and the vigilant policemen (Stanley Holloway and Robert Adair). I dislike the glorification of violence on the screen, even though justice eventually triumphs. In this case, however, the unsavoury plot has all the marks of authenticity, as is evidenced by a recent and amazingly similar occurrence in London.

The Winslow Boy (Plaza, Piccadilly Circus) is based on an actual famous case in which the parents of a young naval cadet, wrongly accused of theft, sued the Admiralty in order to vindicate the boy's character. The film is superbly done, with brilliant performances by Robert Donat, as counsel for the boy; Sir Cedric Hardwicke, as the father; Margaret Leightman; Kathleen Harrison; and Neil North, as the boy.

The Weaker Sex (Odeon, Marble Arch) is a well-contrived version of the stage play, "No Medals," by Esther McCracken, in which the difficulties of an average middle-class family during the war and after are treated with conviction and not a little humour. Ursula Jeans is really fine as the central figure, and she is ably supported by Cecil Parker, Joan Hopkins, and Derek Bond.

D. W. Griffiths's silent film, The Birth of a Nation is revived at the Everyman, Hampstead. F.H.S.

HENDON EX-SERVICEMEN

Anti-Defamation and Cultural Activities

[By a JEWISH CHRONICLE Reporter]

Increased membership, a full cultural programme, and a considerable contribution to the anti-defamation activities were the main items in the report of the past year's work presented by Major Montague Walters, the chairman, at the annual meeting of the Hendon and Golders Green Branch of the Association of Jewish Ex-Service Men and Women, held on Monday at the Hendon Synagogue.

They had nearly 350 active members, but there was still considerable room for improvement, Major Walters said. They had three sub-committees; one for anti-defamation, under the chairmanship of Mr. Goodrich; one for recruiting and publicity, under the chairmanship of Mr. B. Winkler; and a sports and social committee, under the chairmanship of Major H. Seigal. A discussion group to train speakers had not proved successful.

In appreciation of the facilities granted by the Hendon Synagogue, the branch had presented a number of Singer's Prayer Books to the synagogue. On November 13 (Armistice Saturday), the service at the synagogue would be given over to the ex-Servicemen and there was to be a special prayer of commemoration.

Major Denfield presented the accounts, which showed a surplus. Donations to charities were £156.

The Rev. L. Hardman, President of the branch, referred to the cultural activities, and suggested that a greater knowledge of Israel was necessary. He would like to see more inter-functions with non-Jewish bodies. He suggested a short evening service or, better still, the full evening service interspersed with English translations after each meeting. He appealed for help for a library in the synagogue.

The following were elected: Major Montague Walters, Chairman; Major H. Seigal, Vice-Chairman; Major Denfield, Treasurer; Messrs. B. Winkler, M. Goodrich, J. Pearl, N. Bloom, S. Bluestone, W. Lawson, D. Silverman, and Miss Ruth Citroen, Committee.

JEWISH BIBLIOGRAPHER IN ENGLAND

[By a JEWISH CHRONICLE Reporter]

Dr. Joseph Prijs, who is in charge of the Hebrew section of the Library of the University of Basle, and is an authority on Hebrew manuscripts, is in England on behalf of his library for the purpose of compiling a bibliography of the Hebrew books printed in Basle since about 1500. Among Dr. Prijs's duties is the responsibility for the cataloguing of Hebrew manuscripts of which there are approximately 400, and of printed Hebrew books, which number some thousands in the whole of Switzerland.

Dr. Prijs, who has been working at the Bodleian, Oxford, and at the British Museum, told me that many of the early Hebrew books printed in Basle can only be found at those two places.

Among the books and manuscripts unearthed by Dr. Prijs are many that were written by well-known Christian Hebraists of the 16th and 17th century, notably by Sebastian Munster and Johann Buxtorf. So far as Jewish works are concerned, the most important were those of the Talmud printed in 1579-1580. Also of interest are the Jewish-German books that were printed in Basle, and of which only one copy is in existence.

Dr. Prijs used to be a Lecturer at Munich University in the department of Jewish Studies which, he said, had been endowed by the late Mr. James Loeb. He is responsible for the genealogy of the late Sir O. E. d'Avigdor Goldsmid, which he prepared at Sir Osmond's request.

MONTY HARRIS, 23, of Lakenheath Road, Southgate, Middlesex, and Nathan Raymond Burns, 23, of Ferndale Road, Tottenham, N., who appeared on remand at the Guildhall, London, on Thursday of last week charged with being concerned together in the unlawful possession of explosives, were committed for trial at the Old Bailey. They pleaded not guilty and reserved their defence. Bail was refused.—(P.A.)

Obituary

Mr. ASHER BEILIN (Tel-Aviv), 67, was well known as a Hebrew and Yiddish playwright. He acted as Secretary, for a time, to Sholem Aleichem. He worked as a journalist in Poland and the United States before settling in Palestine. While in America he was, for a short period, editor of the JEWISH MORNING JOURNAL.

Mr. SAMUEL GORDON (Hull), 77, was, for many years, President and Treasurer of the Lower Union Street Beth Hamedresh and former Chairman of the Hebrew Communal School. In recent years, he was an active member of the Council of the Western Synagogue and of the Chevra Kadisha.

Mr. ITZHAK LUFTBAN (Tel-Aviv) 59, was co-founder of the Histadrut and editor of the Mapai weekly HAPOEL HATZAIR.

Miss STELLA PLOSKIN (Birmingham), 22, was actively associated with many communal youth organisations. "She will be particularly remembered," writes Mr. B. J. Goldstein, "for her work as Hon. Secretary to the production committees of the recent communal revues, 'Kommunal Kapers' and 'Second Helping.' Wherever Birmingham Jewish youth gather, she will be sadly missed."

THE LATE SIR CHARLES WRENCH

In a tribute to Sir Charles Wrench, President of the London Federation of Boys' Clubs, who died last week at the age of 73, Mr. Lionel Warson writes: "Nearly every Jewish Boys' Club in London is affiliated to the Federation, and Sir Charles was always pleased to welcome members of Jewish clubs in the dramatic and other competitions. I found him very encouraging and helpful during the first two years of the Hackney Jewish Boys' Club. He attended the consecration in February, 1940."

RECENT WILLS

The former Governor-General of Australia, SIR ISAAC ISAACS, who died in February, left estate in Victoria sworn at £A.5,380 gross. Sir Isaac bequeathed many of his papers and insignia to the Commonwealth National Museum "in memory of the first Australian-born Governor-General and as a perpetual reminder of the right of Australians to aspire to the highest positions in the gift of their native land."

TRAVEL NOTES

By "GREEN FLAG"

A correspondent who recently returned from a tour of Tunisia, sends me a friendly warning, which I gladly pass on. Addresses given in certain Jewish handbooks, he writes, are not always reliable. For instance, one place listed in a booklet issued by a London Jewish organisation turned out to be a back room—with far from a pleasant odour at that—in a cosmopolitan port.

As for the so-called Jewish restaurants in Tunis, Sfax, and Homt Souk, half of them are hidden away in the native quarters, and the food and service are of the poorest. Care should also be exercised on the Isle of Djerba, and at Sousse, where one in seven of the population is a Jew. My correspondent advises every Jewish visitor to Tunis to call first at the offices of the Syndicat D'Initiative, 1, Avenue Carthage, where visitors will be directed to a suitable Kasher restaurant.

Answers to Correspondents

M. Goodwin (Loughton): Write to the Hebrew Immigrant Aid Society, 425, Lafayette Street, New York, for details of the facilities offered to prospective settlers.

Hermann Goldberger (N.W.5): There are kasher kitchens and synagogues in both the Queen Mary and the Queen Elizabeth, but the kashrut is not supervised by any religious authority.

"Chalutz" (Bow Road, E.): It would appear that you have Yahrzeit while you will be waiting for the ship at Marseilles. Kaddish can be said at the Marseilles Synagogue, 117, Rue Breteuil.

MISSING RELATIVES

Inquiries have been received by THE JEWISH CHRONICLE with regard to the following Missing Relatives, etc.

Mrs. Chaja Goldberg (née Topol), 55, aunt, of Lomza, daughter of Lejzer Hersz and Sura, is sought by Ala Pukier, Klodzko, daughter of Israel and Pesa.

Hyman Cohen, nephew, born in England, son of Rabbi Abraham Cohen and Milly, of Warsaw, is sought by Charles Proffman, New York.

Mrs. Hinda Szurik (née Krawiec), 70, aunt, of Siemiatycze, daughter of Moshe and Sura, and family, are sought by Kalman Krawiec, Lodz.

Isu Silverman, about 35, born in London and employed by his brother, Morris, in the Lambeth Furnishing Company, is sought by Misu Bernstein, Rumania.

Berl Kornbeuser is sought by Schia Feiler and Feve Stengel.

Lion and Yechezkiel Kossoy, of Homel, Russia, who came to London in 1905, great-uncles, about 60 to 70, are sought by Edward Kossoy, son of Yaakow, in Tel-Aviv.

Rachel and Cippa (C[illegible]) Krasnowa, of Balta, who came from Odessa to London in 1924 and were last heard of by inquirer's parents in 1940, are sought by Eli.

Information with regard to the above will be gladly received at the offices of THE JEWISH CHRONICLE, Newspaper House, 20, High Street, High Wycombe, Bucks, and duly transmitted to the proper quarters.

U.N. and Palestine

temporarily shelved. The Jews want delay—though not too long a delay—until passions roused by the Bernadotte affair have subsided; and they have also not abandoned hope of direct talks with the Arabs. Furthermore, they want the opportunity for more detailed consideration of the mediator's proposals. The Arabs, too, need time to compose the existing differences between themselves.

The Eastern bloc is at present in favour of implementation of the November resolution of the General Assembly, although it is believed that they have not yet received final instructions from Moscow.

It is known that the Russians wish for a trusteeship for Jerusalem, or at least for its internationalisation, in order to retain a foothold there. Moscow is now taking over Russian church property in the Holy City, and will in due course demand its share in the protection of certain shrines. Russia will also advocate the creation of a Palestinian Arab State, believing that the handing over of Arab Palestine to Abdullah would strengthen Britain.

The decision to postpone consideration of the Palestine question has chagrined the British delegation while it is regarded by the Arabs as a "partial success." The Jews, too, are satisfied with a temporary delay, although they would have been prepared to deal with the matter immediately had it been necessary to do so.

The situation has been described to me by one observer as "an Arab-Jewish victory."

Palestine "Free from Strife"

In the course of his opening address to the United Nations General Assembly, Mr. George Marshall, United States Secretary of State, declared that their aim should be "a Palestine free from strife and threat of strife, with both Jews and Arabs assured of peaceful development, the early demobilisation of armed forces, with a return to peaceful conditions and normal living, the repatriation of refugees, and economic aid to both Jews and Arabs."

He also pleaded for the admission of both Israel and Transjordan to membership of the United Nations.

Announcing British support for Count Bernadotte's proposals, Mr. Ernest Bevin, the British Foreign Secretary, appealed to the Assembly to reach an early decision on the matter.

For 25 years, he said, the British Government had held a Mandate of which the chief object was to prepare for self-government for Jews and Arabs in Palestine so that they should live together in harmony. The problem had proved to be insoluble; but, said Mr. Bevin, the British Government had reason to be proud of its contribution to the development of the country and the well-being of its people. Whatever might happen in the future, the future rulers of Palestine would be building on foundations laid by British administrators.

The problem of Palestine, Mr. Bevin went on, had been accentuated by the persecution of the Jews by Hitler, with a resulting increase in Jewish immigration. The British Government had been forced to the conclusion that the only way in which the problem could be solved was by surrendering the Mandate and asking the United Nations to find a settlement.

The termination of the Mandate had been immediately followed by hostilities. The present truce, he added, was largely due to the devotion and courage of Count Bernadotte, whose tragic death had cast a shadow over any decision on Palestine that might be arrived at.

Basis for Agreement

The British Government believed, Mr. Bevin said, that Count Bernadotte's recommendations constituted the best hope of healing the breach between these two Semitic peoples. They provided a basis for agreement without either party sacrificing any of its vital interests.

Mr. Vishinsky, the Soviet delegate, charged the Security Council with having "failed to discharge its duty in respect of Palestine," and declared that the General Assembly's partition decision had been "frustrated."

"In fact," he said, "the policy pursued by the majority of the Security Council on the Palestine issue was not directed at taking steps to eliminate national contradictions in Palestine and to secure good neighbourly relations between the Jewish and Arab peoples, but only helped to aggravate these contradictions and pushed both Arabs and Jews along the road of strife and armed clashes which led to the outbreak of war in Palestine."

Mr. Zygmunt Modzelewski, the Polish Foreign Minister, supporting this view, declared that "the defenders of selfish, mostly oil, interests" had attempted to prevent the realisation of the decisions taken. That was why there was no peace in Palestine.

"Nobody," he went on, "can deny that the Jewish State of Israel has come into being, that it exists and that it shows its vitality. I think that if the solution

NEW LAWS AGAINST TERRORISM

Truce Breaches Increase

[From our Own Correspondent]

TEL-AVIV

New emergency laws for the suppression of terrorist activity in Israel were announced by the State Council on Thursday of last week. They provide for penalties up to 20 years' imprisonment for active membership of terrorist organisations.

Addressing the Council, Mr. David Ben-Gurion, the Prime Minister and Minister of Defence, paid a warm tribute to the late Count Bernadotte, expressing the "horror and indignation" of the Government of Israel at the foul crime. He announced a reward of £5,000 for information leading to the arrest of the persons guilty of the murder.

Nearly 300 members of the Stern Gang are now under arrest. Mr. Ben-Gurion said that the Israeli Government was determined to eradicate terrorist organisations from the country.

Reports of the receipt of letters threatening the lives of Mr. Ben-Gurion and other Ministers were denied.

New Arab Atrocities

Breaches of the truce are again increasing in seriousness, even apart from Jerusalem, where such incidents are of daily occurrence.

Last Saturday, the Arab Legion attacked and captured a Jewish position near the village of Midya, near Lydda, capturing 22 Jewish soldiers. When Jewish troops retook the hill, they found 19 beheaded and mutilated bodies; the other three soldiers are still missing. Arab losses during this operation were heavy.

Dr. Bunche, acting mediator, has requested both sides to cease activity in the Midya area, despite the fact that there had been an obvious breach of the truce by the Arab Legion there.

Other serious breaches of the truce are reported from the Beit Eshel settlement, near Beersheba, which has been shelled almost daily by Egyptian troops, and repeated attacks by the Arab Legion on the Gesher settlement, near the Jordan hydro-electric power station.

of the Palestine problem had been left to the Jewish and Arab peoples, it would have been to the advantage of both."

M. Schuman, the French Foreign Minister, declared that he considered the Bernadotte report to be "a sound basis for discussion." It was important, he added, to establish international status for Jerusalem.

A full acceptance of the report by the peoples of Palestine, said M. Schuman, was a sine qua non for permanent peace in the country.

Sir Mohammad Zafrullah Khan, Pakistani Foreign Minister, warned the Assembly that "at no time and in no circumstances will the East ever assimilate or reconcile itself to a sovereign State of Israel."

From talks I have had with various delegates, I understand that the Benelux Powers and the Scandinavian countries are likely to support the report and the recommendations.

American Hesitation

There appears still to be some hesitation among the members of the United States delegation, who are doubtful about the possible effect of Mr. Marshall's recent statement on the forthcoming American elections.

It is rumoured that President Truman is anxious to delay consideration of the Palestine question until after the elections; but Mr. Bevin is reported to be pressing for an immediate solution.

All the Arab States will, I gather, oppose the plan, particularly because it is regarded as being specifically favourable to King Abdullah. The decisive vote, one way or another, is likely to come from the Latin-American countries.

It is understood that Russia and her satellites will maintain their uncompromising stand in favour of the implementation of the partition resolution of November last.

Inquiries made by American observers indicate that the United Nations approval of the plan depends on a number of factors. They include the questions whether the Arabs will accept the existence and permanency of the State of Israel, whether they will press for the return of the refugees, and whether they will agree to the ceding of Galilee to the Jews. Other points at issue are those of guaranteeing the frontiers of the Jewish and the proposed Arab States and which of the Arab nations will have authority over any Arab State that may be created in Palestine.

Questions particularly applicable to the Jews are whether Israel will be willing to cede the Negev, whether the Jews will insist on a corridor to Jerusalem, and what measure of internationalisation will be applied to Jerusalem, and how it can be protected by an international force, should such a force be provided.

BRITONS KILLED IN ARAB 'PLANE

Shot Down By Israeli Fighter

Mr. David Woodford, DAILY TELEGRAPH correspondent, and Mr. John Nixon, B.B.C. correspondent in the Middle East, were killed when an Arab 'plane crashed near the Transjordan frontier on Thursday afternoon of last week. An Arab passenger was also killed.

The 'plane was on its way from Beirut to Amman.

An Israeli military spokesman admitted on Monday that the aircraft had been shot down by a Jewish 'plane. The shooting took place only after the aeroplane had twice been ordered to land, he added.

The Arab 'plane was off course if it was flying from Beirut to Amman, the spokesman said, for it flew up and down the Israeli front lines.

Ignored Signals

It was spotted by a Jewish fighter on patrol, which twice, using international signals, ordered it to land. It made no attempt to obey the signals.

The Israeli spokesman added that after the Arab 'plane had been ordered to land the Israeli 'plane fired a warning burst of tracer bullets across its bows. It still took no heed and continued on its flight over the Israeli lines near Safed. The Israeli fighter thus had no alternative but to shoot down the Arab aircraft, the spokesman said.

The United Nations has asked for a full investigation of the circumstances, and Major Schupp, senior United Nations observer in Amman, is forming a joint Belgian-French-American board for the purpose.—(Reuter.)

"UNWARRANTED ATTACK" BY ARABS

Brigadier-General William Riley, United Nations observer in Palestine, accused Transjordan Arab forces on Monday of firing on United Nations observers with a Jewish convoy last Wednesday, and then shooting and killing four Jews.

He said the "massacre" was "a most serious breach of the truce" and "an unwarranted attack."—(Reuter)

MEDIATOR'S PLAN FOR PALESTINE

Full Support by Dr. Bunche

[From our Correspondent]

LAKE SUCCESS

Support for the late Count Bernadotte's plan for Palestine "without qualifications and in its entirety" has been expressed by Dr. Ralph Bunche, the acting mediator, in a United Nations broadcast.

Declaring that the time is now ripe for a settlement of the Palestine dispute, Dr. Bunche maintains that the late mediator's conclusions provide the most sound and practical means of attaining this end.

COUNT BERNADOTTE MEMORIAL

United Nations officials, the Consular Corps, Israeli Government officers, and members of the Truce Commission attended a memorial service in Jerusalem on Sunday to Count Bernadotte, timed to coincide with his burial in Stockholm.

The service was conducted by the Rev. W. Clark Kerr, Moderator of the Church of Scotland Presbytery in Jerusalem, who paid tribute to Count Bernadotte's "brilliant, impartial, and selfless effort."—(Reuter)

ISRAEL GREETS JEWS OF AMERICA

[From our Correspondent—NEW YORK]

The Jewish Press here prints the first official Rosh Hashana greetings from Israel to the Jews of America, issued through Mr. Eliahu Epstein.

"We bring to the Jews of America," says the message, "heartiest greetings of Israel for the New Year, with traditional L'Shana Tova Tikatevu."

BRIGADIER CLAYTON RESIGNS

Brigadier P. A. Clayton has resigned his post of British Adviser at the Middle East office on Arab affairs, according to London Press reports, and will be succeeded by Mr. John William Wall.

Mr. Wall has served in Egypt, the Lebanon, Saudi Arabia, and Persia, in the Levant Consular Service.

An "Israel Association for the United Nations" has been established in Jerusalem.

MOTOR-ROADS FOR ISRAEL

Tel-Aviv-Haifa Underground

Plans are being prepared by the Israeli Government to build a motor-road from Aqaba to Metulla, the northernmost point in Israel, on the Syrian frontier. The road is designed to form part of a world system of motor-roads stretching from Moscow to Ceylon and from London to Bombay.

This announcement was made recently by Mr. Mordechai Bentov, Israeli Minister of Labour, in Tel-Aviv. Another plan on which experts are working, he added, is an underground railway from Tel-Aviv to Haifa.

3,000,000 in Ten Years

These plans envisage a Jewish population of 3,000,000 within ten years in Israel, and all settlement schemes are being worked out on this basis. Within the next two years 250,000 Jews are expected to arrive, and it will be necessary to provide for them housing totalling 80,000 rooms. This project will employ 20,000 building workers, and the estimated cost is £50,000,000. A national housing company is now being established by all existing housing corporations, with a joint capital of £10,000,000.

A special department has been established within the Ministry to deal with the problem of employment for Arabs, Mr. Bentov stated. A census of Arab manpower in Israel is now in progress.—(J.T.A.)

LEGAL DEFENCE OF TERRORISTS

When a member of the Stern Group faced a Tel-Aviv court this week on a charge of having forged official documents, his lawyer, Dr. Lange, announced that he could not defend his client because under the new Emergency Regulations he could be charged with aiding terrorists.

The argument was ridiculed by the Assistant Attorney-General, who declared that any lawyer was free to defend members of a terrorist group in court.

Dr. Lange, however, persisted in his refusal.—(J.T.A.)

AGUDA DELEGATION IN ISRAEL

United Religious Front?

[From our Own Correspondent—PARIS]

A delegation of the Agudas Israel World Organisation has arrived in Tel-Aviv. The delegation is headed by Mr. H. A. Goodman, the Political Secretary, the other British members being Mr. B. Strauss, of London, and Dr. M. Rottenberg, of Manchester.

Mr. Goodman told me, when the delegation was passing through Paris, that one of its chief purposes is to discuss with the other Orthodox parties in Israel the formation of a united religious front in the forthcoming general elections, and particularly to collaborate with the Mizrachi in "rebuilding Israel in the spirit of Jewish tradition."

BRITON FREED

William George Hawkins, one of the two Britons accused of espionage, was freed by the Jerusalem District Court on Wednesday afternoon. The Court's judgment on the other accused, Frederick Sylvester, will be announced next Friday.—(Reuter)

EX-MUFTI IN PALESTINE

The ex-Mufti of Jerusalem was reported on Wednesday to have made his first open visit to Palestine since his exile in 1937. He went to Gaza from Cairo to be present at the formation of the new Palestine Arab Constituent Assembly.—(Reuter)

Israeli police have recaptured 25 of 26 members of the Stern Gang, who escaped from a Tel-Aviv prison. The men had been detained in connection with Count Bernadotte's assassination.—(Reuter)

The Mizrachi World Conference has decided to set up a united religious party for the forthcoming general elections in Israel. The Executive was empowered to approach other religious parties for this purpose.—(J.T.A.)

The reciting of Selichot from the Great Synagogue, Tel-Aviv, was broadcast last Saturday and relayed on Rome radio. The broadcast was opened by Chief Rabbi I. J. Unterman. This was the first relayed transmission since the proclamation of the State of Israel.—(J.T.A.)
